IF YOU THINK CLEAN ENERGY IS A BAD DEAL FOR MAINE

THINK AGAIN

Some people are saying that the Clean Energy Corridor only benefits Massachusetts and there's nothing in it for Maine. That's simply not true. In early July, Hydro-Québec commited to provide the state with 500,000 megawatt hours of clean, renewable electricity at a discounted price – enough to power 70,000 Maine homes. Maine will also receive hundreds of millions of dollars in payments to go towards rate relief, rural broadband, heat pumps, charging stations and more. If you think the Clean Energy Corridor is a bad deal for Maine, think again.
