Public Relations Program for the Italian Printing, Converting and Paper Machinery Industry

Jan. 27, 1981

A. Introduction

1980 marked a successful beginning for the ICE's three-year program to increase the visibility and appeal of Italian graphic arts, printing and converting machinery to the American market. The public relations program was broad-based -- supporting the message of the Italian printing, converting and paper machinery industry in trade shows, press receptions and one-on-one interviews and through a variety of editorial materials ranging from product releases to feature articles.

Italian participation in the Print '80 trade show in Chicago last April generated wide acceptance for Italian manufacturers through pre-show editorial contact, the show itself, a cocktail reception and press luncheon during the show, and numerous clips that appeared in show and post-show editions of the trade press.

"Facts & Figures," a newsletter promoting Italian equipment to more than 1100 major users and distributors also was begun. News releases highlighted Italian products, Italian Trade Commission news and events and the Converflex '81 show scheduled for this spring in Milan. Two case history feature articles were finished, one showing how Italian machinery helped make a corrugated paperboard converter more profitable, the other showing how selling three different lines of Italian equipment has been good business for a major printing equipment distributor. Together, these efforts generated a wide attention for Italian manufacturers.

The Italian printing, converting and paper machinery industry was represented by Drs. Guido Corbella and Spartaco Cambi in interviews with the trade press in New York and Chicago. The result has been increased awareness of Italian technology and equipment in key trade media serving the American market.

With the program established last year to promote Italian graphic arts equipment now running full speed, Ruder & Finn looks forward to expanding that program into increased exposure and more positive publicity for Italian equipment in 1981. The account team has reviewed details of the past year closely, assessing all areas of the program for additional ways to deliver and reinforce the message of the Italian industry to potential customers and distributors.

The program that follows offers what R&F feels is a realistic, cost-effective selection of coordinated public relations efforts to best represent Italian equipment to the American market. It reflects the input of the Italian Trade Commissioner in Chicago, Dr. Angelo Bazzano and the ACIMGA delegate, Dr. Spartaco Cambi, as well as R&F's extensive experience and resources in marketing public relations. Taking the 1980 program as a starting point, the 1981 program factors in the 1980 market research findings and builds on strengths already established to increase recognition of the Italian printing, converting and paper machinery industry as a dominant force in the U.S. market.

B. Major Projects

(Mar. 1 through Dec. 31, 1981)

1. Press Releases

R&F will produce and disseminate current product information and news about the Italian industry through a series of regular press releases. R&F will produce news/product releases at the rate of about one per month. Release material will be based on information supplied by ACIMGA via Dr. Cambi and will be spread as evenly as possible among the major categories of Italian equipment.

2. Trade Show/Convention Seminars

R&F will support through publicity the participation of Italian industry booked into three major trade shows by ITC/ACIMGA, including a technical seminar to be presented by Italian industry experts at each. R&F will provide counsel involving invitations (which will be produced and mailed by ITC), will write and disseminate one or two press releases on the seminars for the trade and general media and will follow up with the press by telephone to ensure that the technical seminar in particular receives maximum publicity. ITC/ACIMGA will supply whatever photographs may be appropriate. One of the trade shows will be in Chicago, one in the southern United States and one in the western United States.

3. Case History Articles

R&F will research, photograph, write and place with trade press a total of four or five case history feature stories illustrating the benefits of using or distributing Italian machinery in the U.S. The final number of stories will depend on out-of-pocket costs incurred by R&F. R&F will suggest subjects from candidates supplied by Dr. Cambi and ACIMGA.

4. Journalist Trips

R&F will advise ITC/ACIMGA regarding the choice of trade media journalists to be invited for expense-paid tours to visit graphic arts machinery manufacturers in Italy. ITC/ACIMGA to handle full details and expenses.

6. Newsletter

The "Facts & Figures" newsletter will be expanded in 1981, following the same general format as last year except for the following changes:

- Five issues, of 4,000 copies mailed per issue.
- Addressing and mailing to a mailing list expanded to a maximum of 4,000 names, all additional addresses to be supplied by ITC/ACIMGA.
- New three-color masthead to be designed by R&F.
- Length to be increased from four to six pages, with the added two pages in the form of a free-standing insert covering a featured segment of the Italian industry; input for the inserts to be based on translations into English from Dr. Cambi of segments featured in the ACIMGA Italian-language newsletter.

- Newsletter to carry an average of two photographs (half-tones) per issue.

7. On-going Press Relations

As part of the overall program, R&F will continue to foster media relations, to solicit coverage of Italian manufacturers and equipment, to stimulate story and news coverage, to provide background information for editor-written feature/news material and to raise editor interest in events, seminars and publicity involving the Italian graphics machinery industry.

8. Program Management

R&F not only will continue its role of managing on-going program planning, execution, coordination and administration of the publicity program it handles, but also will continue to provide professional counsel, creative planning, project administration and management of the advertising and research firms' activities. This project item also includes miscellaneous day-to-day activity in behalf of ITC -- such as handling customer, reader and editorial inquiries about Italian graphic machinery equipment. This item also includes counsel by R&F with respect to the preparation of a directory listing Italian printing, converting and paper machinery manufacturers, their product lines, and their U.S. sales outlets. Basic information for the directory, as well as all production costs, are the responsibility of ITC/ACIMGA. (This budget does not include activity by G&M Management Consultants, Milan, Italy.)
