Canadian Government has principal ownership interest in the Company which it purchased from Hawker Siddeley of England. As a result of this ownership, I have made the assumption that the Canadian Government will in fact exercise control. From time to time the Canadian Government is prepared to partially finance the development of new aircraft but the Company is expected to pay back such funds advanced for development by commercial and military sales. Some of the development activity of the Company is from time to time partially subsidized in order to enable the Company to initiate production of new items.
