Tsai Ing-wen meeting with House speaker protested

By I. SUMMIT in Los Angeles, California

A meeting between Taiwan leader Tsai Ing-wen and US House Speaker Kevin McCarthy sparked outrage among Chinese and other communities as well as peace activists, who protested in front of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library on Wednesday.

Tsai arrived in Los Angeles on Tuesday night during her trip to two Central American countries. The “meeting” through the US and her meeting with the Republican politicians from California have been condemned for damaging cross-strait relations and US-China relations.

“Such acts have gravely violated the one-China principle and the provisions of the three China-US joint communiques, seriously infrared China’s sovereignty and territorial integrity and sent serious wrong signals which are separatist forces for the ‘Taiwan independence’,” said a spokesperson for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs on Thursday.

“Can firmly oppose and strongly condemn the acts. Over recent days, in discussions of the stem representations and repeated warnings lodged by China, the United States has obstinately allowed Tsai Ing-wen’s ‘transit’ trip through the United States and the high profile meeting between Tsai and US House Speaker Kevin McCarthy, the highest-ranking official of the US government. It is also used to US officials and congressional members contact with Tsai, and provided a platform for Tsai to make separate remarks seeking ‘Taiwan independence’,” the spokesperson said.

“Tsai and the US House Speaker have conspired to flash the ‘Taiwan independence’ banner at the cross-strait affairs, which will only lead to the escalation of the cross-strait problem and the US-China relations,” the spokesperson warned.

Tsai’s visit to the US “is a national security enemy” among the entrance of the library where Tsai met with McCarthy on Wednesday.

Dozens of statements from Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, Seattle and Portland participated in the protest. They held banners denouncing their organization’s names and slogans like “Opposing Tsai Ing-wen’s transit trip through the US,” “Utilization of Taiwan to manipulate unification of China,” and “Stop the provocations on China.”

This meeting does not have to happen. This meeting was deliberately done in an attempt to escalate the tension between the US and China. If these politicians were really interested in the stability and the security of the Chinese people in both Taiwan and the mainland, then they would not have done this meeting,” Chakib Ben Moussa, an organizer of Pro-China Peace, told China Daily during the protest.

“This visit of Tai and partly the meeting with our lawmakers in the potential violation of the Bennett-Gongphat Directive. Taiwan is our leaders here in the US, and we have a responsibility as people living in the US to tell our leaders that this is not OK,” he said.

Enhancing Sino-EU ties can ensure Eurasian prosperity

China and the European Union are good trade partner relationship. Following visits by German Chancellor Olaf Scholz, European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen and US Senator Lindsey Graham to China, the two sides are expected to do more work to promote trade and investment in a stable and progressive way.

(Medical Guide) LIVING EASIER

The number of hospital-acquired infections, or nosocomial infections, is a growing problem in today’s hospitals.

A recent report by the World Health Organization (WHO) revealed that nosocomial infections are a major cause of patient deaths and are often caused by the use of antibiotics.

The report noted that measures such as hand hygiene and the use of antibiotics need to be strengthened to reduce the risk of nosocomial infections.

According to the report, the risk of nosocomial infections can be reduced by:

1. Improving hand hygiene practices among healthcare workers.
2. Implementing infection control measures such as the use of personal protective equipment (PPE).
3. Reducing the use of antibiotics.
4. Promoting patient safety and reducing the number of invasive procedures.

By ZHUO LANTUO

Canada stands still

BY CHUN HU

Canada has been in a state of flux over the past year, with the country facing numerous challenges and changes.

Despite these challenges, Canada has managed to remain stable, and its economy continues to grow at a steady pace.

Canada’s economy has continued to grow, with exports rising and the Canadian dollar remaining strong.

However, the country’s demographics are changing, with a growing number of immigrants and a aging population.

Canada has been facing a number of challenges, including a growing homeless population and a lack of affordable housing.

However, the country has been working to address these issues, with the government announcing plans to increase funding for affordable housing and homelessness programs.

Canada’s healthcare system remains one of the best in the world, with a high standard of care and access to treatments.

However, the country has been facing challenges in terms of funding and resources.

Canada has been working to improve its healthcare system, with plans to increase funding and improve access to care.
Guides: New occupation attracts recruits

From page 2

Li, who used to work as an intern assistant in a hospital, acclaims the work of hospital escorts while watching television show in March last year. “If I could do this work, as I am familiar with the medical system and have a good understanding of patients,” he said.

Initially, Li helped patients obtain medicine, as many of them could not visit a hospital due to COVID-19 prevention and control measures.

“During the busiest period two months before Chinese New Year I received about 10 requests for medicine each day, and accompanied patients requesting emergency treatment, or those who severely felt ill to the hospital,” Li said.

He became a full-time hospital escort this year, and recently registered his own company.

“Antidote toward consummation are not only for patients who are not willing to pay for such medical services, but are low and not ‘Li’ said. On average, he charges 109 yuan ($1) for each patient he receives for help, and 209 yuan per a half day’s work, which earns about 10,000 yuan per month, and receive tips from some patients.

Seniors who are 65 or older account for 25 percent of his client’s young patients of sick children 20 patients, while single young people working and living alone in Dalian accounts for another 20 percent. With Li running around them, young patients can focus on their children without worrying about having to find their way around a large hospital.

Many private requests receive for help are from patients I have dealt with before, said Li, adding that some who have chronic diseases need him for a fixed period of time to maintain their medicine regularly.

Li enjoys sharing his work on social media platforms such as the video-sharing platform Douyin, which helps him attract more clients.

He is now working with four partners.

After a frequent period of hospital visits, Li said that his addition to being optimistic about his future, is now paying more attention to his health.

“Visiting to the hospital can be worrying, so we look after our own health as well as that of our family members,” he said.

Deep understanding

Zhao Min, 30, has a deep understanding of the anxiety that comes with surgery and a family member to the hospital.

During nearly two years, he has traveled to Beijing from Hangzhou, Zhejiang province, several times for his mother to have medical treatment at the tumor by her local hospital.

“Someone who is familiar with the hospital system can provide great assistance to people like us who are in need of medical treatment,” Zhao said.

The first time and his mother went to a well-known hospital, they got lost in a crowd of people and had to walk 20 minutes in a hospital to reach the right entrance.

“At first, the hospital visit was careful, but several unexpected situations occurred,” Zhao said.

After her mother saw the doctor, she needed four CT scans, a liver and blood tests. The pair had to line up for each medical examination, and any delays could result in the examinations being overbooked.

For his mother’s CT scan, Zhao was given a number at 8:30 am that was fourth-to-last on that day’s waiting list.

“If I had gone there after the other two women, we would have had to return for the CT scan the next day,” he said.

He has one more breakdown after arriving in the wrong area of the hospital, which resulted in a doctor’s appointment being canceled.

When Zhao spoke to a friend in his home state about the trouble of going to hospitals for medical treatment, the friend advised him to hire a hospital escort.

The friend, who is an administrative worker at a local hospital, also said he wanted to escort patients in Beijing to provide necessary assistance.

New career

Song Xiaoming, who comes from Dalian, traveled to Beijing in December to start work as a hospital escort.

The 42-year-old used to run an off-campus school in Dalian to provide students with additional academic instruction, but due to the impact of the COVID-19 epidemic, he decided to change his job, setting his sights on the elderly.

Song first encountered a hospital escort at the end of last year, when he accompanied a colleague to see doctors in Beijing.

“With its rich medical resources, Beijing is a destination for patients nationwide who have complex medical conditions. Some large hospitals in the city treat over 10,000 consultations a day,” Song said.

“Local residents may not be familiar with a particular hospital in the capital, while those from other cities can be even more confused and helpless.”

“Seeking the prospects for hospital escorts, Song registered a company and rented an office in Beijing’s Dongsong district.

He feels the most fundamental part of such a service is running errands. The more professional aspect involves providing useful information and helping patients avoid unnecessary costs.

Song and his colleagues started working in the neighborhood near their office. Their first client was a woman in her 70s whose only child works overseas.

After signing a contract to clarify both their rights and obligations, Song helped the woman secure a doctor’s appointment, before accompanying her to the hospital.

At the request of the woman’s son, with the doctor’s permission, Song and the son were in contact on WeChat throughout the process.

“The and has seen are so satisfied with our work that the mother recommend our services to her neighbors,” Song said.

His company now has six employees who handle five requests for help from patients a day. It charges 320 yuan for each request that takes less than four hours to handle, and 500 yuan for those that take more than four hours.

The team also offers remote medical consultation services for patients living in other cities.

Patients do not need to travel to Beijing, as they can email copies of their medical history, test results and medicines sent by Song, who see the doctor, obtain the medication, and mail it to the patients.

“This is really convinient, fast and much cheaper than travelling in Beijing,” Song said.

Regulations needed

As new profession, hospital escorts are not listed in the latest version of the Occupational Classification Code of the People’s Republic of China published by the Ministry of Human Resources and Social Security last year.

The occupation has yet to have an agreed set of standards for safety and sustainable development.

Song said there is a lot at stake, including what to do if a client withholds some information, or if accidents happen to them.

To avoid such risks and improve their services, Song and his colleagues always wear a small video camera to record the entire process while they accompany patients to the hospital.

Some hospital escorts require a family member to accompany patients who are 80 or older and program patients in labor.

After using the success of the hospital escort business on social media outlets such as Douyin and the Xiangong Lindsey platform, more people are more willing to try their hand at the occupation.

Short videos broadcast on such platforms portray a market in full swing and will have hospital escorts earn tens of thousands of yuan a month.

However, the escorts seldom have the requisite knowledge or experience of medicine and healthcare.

Rao Yiqing, a National People’s Congress deputy and staff member at Laoyuan Water Group Co. in Hsin Hsin, has appealed for the new profession to be recognized.

“This type of on-site medical guidance, which helps patients with medical treatment and also increases employment, still has some pitfalls,” she said.

Before this week’s two sessions, China’s main political annual event, she visited hospitals and related medical institutions to learn about the situation and seek suggestions.

“The government departments involved should issue management measures for professional medical guidance or soon possible, clarifying duties, services and fees,” she said.

Bai Jingshan urged the authority to regular the entry threshold for hospital escorts and help avoid conflicts between the newcomers.

Voluntary efforts

In January, National Bureau of Statistics data showed people who are 65 or older accounted for nearly 15 percent of the population on the Chinese mainland.

Meanwhile, the National Working Commission on Aging said that in 2020, more than 83 million people who were 65 or older were finding it difficult to perform everyday tasks.

Su Nan, director of Anaphasia, a private nonprofit professional social work service organization in Dalian, believes that such elderly patients requiring the use of smart devices can be difficult for elderly people to use.

On March 4, he and colleagues performed voluntary work at First affiliated Hospital of Dalian Medical University, helping elderly patients familiarize themselves with the treatment process and use self-service machines, among other things.

As a young medical guidance, and we’ll take this a step further,” Su said.

In residential communities that have ‘third social workers, the plan is to provide hospital escorts for free to those living in poverty on substance allowances.

Many hospitals provide volunteer services for patients.

In August, the volunteer team at First affiliated Hospital of Dalian Medical University joined the Dalian Young Unions Public Service Center and Dalian Young Union Organization in setting up voluntary service desks to provide assistance for patients and assistance for the elderly.

The volunteers serve as a connect to hospital departments and help them direct patients, answer questions, show beds, wheelchairs and other services.

Yang Shengda,secretary of the hospital’s youth league committee, said, “The volunteers have nearly 1,000 hours of service, helping more than 50,000 patients, including over 1,000 seminars with special needs.”

When volunteers from the Xinghai Cancer Association give psychological counseling, guidance and other services at the tumor clinic, they also offer patients emotional support.

Jin Dang, head of the association, said, “Many patients not only need medical treatment, but also emotional comfort. As we volunteers are recovering from cancer surgery ourselves, we have more in common with the patients, so we can conduct psychological counseling for them when they free from anxiety and emotional pain.”

Liu Mingzhi in Chengdu contributed to this story.
TOP NEWS

Fatal stabbing of executive in SF shocks tech

Bob Lee, 43, of MobileCoin previously worked with Elon Musk, Jack Dorsey

Bob Lee was a dynamic San Francisco startup entrepreneur who loved to work with his hands, from building computer hardware to designing products for companies like Facebook and Tesla. He was a true innovator who believed in the power of renewable energy and sustainable living. His passion for innovation and technology was infectious, inspiring many to pursue their own dreams. His death has left a void in the local tech community.

Banking crisis demonstration

Demonstrators opposed to the power of Switzerland's financial sector raise a banner in Zurich on Tuesday during a protest outside Credit Suisse Group AG's headquarters, where shareholders were meeting. Credit Suisse is being taken over by the larger domestic Swiss UBS Group in a move announced last week.

WTO urged to investigate chip export restrictions

China's foreign ministry on Wednesday urged the World Trade Organization (WTO) to investigate export restrictions on semiconductor export controls.

Chinese representatives said at a regular press briefing that Japan has introduced rules that are far more restrictive than those of other countries, including China.

Furthermore, China is concerned about the WTO's ability to investigate export controls that are already in place, in contrast to the situation in the US.

The joint move by the three nations was seen as a response to the US's move on chip export restrictions.

Ties: EU a permanent strategic partner

EU-China relations may be described as the most important among all major partners of China.

Europe has been among China's top foreign partners for many years. At the same time, China is the EU's second-largest trading partner, and it is also China's largest trade partner.

China and the EU maintain a win-win relationship, with both sides benefiting from economic cooperation.

Dinosaurs' raise awareness

People in dinosaur costumes wave on walls at a beach in Sydney on October 5, 2023, as part of a campaign to raise awareness about the dangers of climate change and the need for urgent action to protect the world's most vulnerable species.
Train collision

A densest major train is seen in Vostok-3, the United States, on Tuesday. At least 18 people died and 22 were injured in a career accident and destruction near the Hague, Dutch emergency services said. ROBINE DE RORA / ANP FOX NEWS

Expert applauds new modernization route

By XI WENDU in Beijing, Xinhua

China now contributes more to global growth than any other country, said Martin Jacques, a member of the British parliament. The United States, Japan, and European countries put the world on the road to modernization, he said in an interview with Xinhua last week.

Jacques said China was on the road to modernization, which is a new energy. He said that the Chinese government has launched a new round of modernization, which is a new way of modernization, or one way to modernization — that was Western modernization.

He said that the Chinese government has launched a new round of modernization, which is a new way of modernization, or one way to modernization — that was Western modernization.

He said that the Chinese government has launched a new round of modernization, which is a new way of modernization, or one way to modernization — that was Western modernization.

He said that the Chinese government has launched a new round of modernization, which is a new way of modernization, or one way to modernization — that was Western modernization.

He said that the Chinese government has launched a new round of modernization, which is a new way of modernization, or one way to modernization — that was Western modernization.

He said that the Chinese government has launched a new round of modernization, which is a new way of modernization, or one way to modernization — that was Western modernization.

He said that the Chinese government has launched a new round of modernization, which is a new way of modernization, or one way to modernization — that was Western modernization.
Some 15 million to lose coverage by Medicaid in US

By MAYA HFOUK

Approximately 15 million people in the United States will lose Medicaid health insurance coverage under a provision of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act that is due to take effect on March 27. The Medicaid enrollment deadline, mandated at the state level, has already resulted in roughly 500,000 people losing coverage in nine states. The deadline for Medicaid eligibility in the remaining 41 states is March 27.

Before the pandemic, the Medicaid program served an estimated 70 million people. Of those, 47 million were childless adults who were likely to be low-income individuals who were not eligible for Medicare. Additional people, such as individuals over 65 years of age, who were eligible for Medicare, were also excluded from Medicaid. As of February 2022, Medicaid enrollment stood at 75 million.

In the latest few months, states have seen a significant increase in applications for Medicaid, as more people have become eligible for the program due to the pandemic. According to the Medicaid and CHIP Action Network, 41 states have already exceeded their baseline enrollment rates, while New York, New Jersey, and Michigan are on track to exceed their baseline rates in the coming weeks.

Tornado strikes Missouri

Keith Finley, who watched a tornado rip through Southeast Missouri last Wednesday, described the damage caused by the storm as "devastating." Finley, a resident of Cape Girardeau, said he and his family were forced to evacuate their home due to the severe weather. The tornado, which lasted for over an hour, caused significant damage to homes and businesses in the area.

Protest: Taiwan leader’s ‘transit’ in US opposed

From page 1

Maozoni said that many American politicians do not understand that the foundation of peaceful relations between the US and China in respect to the one-China principle and allowing Taiwan to maintain its identity is not a burden, but a false one.

The American people do not benefit at all from this meeting, which is only intended to demonize China, to make the US and China enemies. If you go to the United States, I will talk with you about this issue. When meeting with the US, I will talk about this issue. When meeting with the US, I will talk about this issue.

The real mission of Sait’s trans- pit is to promote Taiwan independent activities, said Fred Zou, deputy secretary-general of the Alliance for China’s Peaceful Reunification, USA. The president of the US and China will meet to talk about the two sides’ relations.

Both the US and China have responsibilities for the world’s peace. We hope the US will not ruin the relationship between the two sides, said Zou.

Julie Feng, a retired US politician and co-founder of Pivot to Peace, said, “I condemn the reckless and irresponsible acts of Speaker McCarthy. Taiwan’s own interests are being damaged, and the US may lose its position in the world.”

The Republicans are always trying to “find the envelope” in the Taiwan question with little punishment. It was the Ridin Administration, said Jones Daily. Taiwan’s officials have thus always provided grist to the mill to those who would like to cut China’s development trajectory by adding a permutation to its development.

The US, as a major power, is the world’s most influential economic power, and Taiwan is a part of the United States. The Chinese will not accept any talks with Taiwan on any form of Taiwan independence, and will always stand by the one-China principle. The Chinese people will not accept any talks with Taiwan on any form of Taiwan independence.
China, a crucial market for us, and we see it as the largest market in the world in the products we produce.

Jean-Marc Dubois, CEO of Adisseo, an animal nutrition provider

The Chinese economy has shown its resilience and sound economic fundamentals amid multiple challenges. Since China’s economic growth actually improved in the first quarter, it will further entrench the profound growth of the country’s middle-income earners and position it as a consumption-driven economy.

Adisseo was acquired by China National Biologic (Group) Co. Ltd., a subsidiary of Shanghai Huaxi Group Co. Ltd. in 2008. It is a core subsidiary and the only company focusing on animal nutrition in Shanghai Huaxi Holdings Co. Ltd’s portfolio.

With more than 70% employees in China, in 2021, the “Franco-China” investment plan aims to support the transformation of the main cities in China by promoting sustainable solutions in the long term.

Source: Adisseo

China and France, considered two major manufacturing powers of the world, are expected to unleash their commercial relations in trade, investment, and tourism. In 2021, both countries will further boost the economic relations, especially in the fields of energy, food, and high-tech sectors.

On the 60th anniversary of the establishment of the China-France Academy of Agricultural Sciences, an agreement was signed to further develop the agricultural technology and trade in France. The cooperation will be expanded to include new and high-end technological solutions.

Unreliable French government has failed to promote the energy projects of the two states, said the French ambassador to China, adding that France will seek to accelerate foreign investment.

Despite slowdowns, both countries are focusing on growing demand and rising global trade generation in their respective economies. The partnership between China and France remains steady in all areas, said CATL. A leading battery manufacturer in China.

GDP growth

By CHEN YU

Contemporary Amperex Technology Co. Ltd. (CATL), the world’s largest battery manufacturer, said its battery plant in Hungary will be “unveiled in finished form” in June, adding that the plant will be first to be completed in the country.

The plant is expected to open in the first quarter of 2024, marking a significant milestone in the country’s efforts to attract foreign investments and boost its manufacturing capabilities.

The company has been investing heavily in the country in recent years, with the goal of becoming a major player in the European market by the end of 2025.
BUSINESS FOCUS

Pearl sellers find treasure in livestreams

Zhejiang merchants' innovative online promotional skills serve as example at home, abroad

By MA ZHENHUIAN and YI YUN

China’s first group of licensed pearl-selling livestreamers received vocational skill certificates in March from the National Gemstone Testing Center. The 12 licensees are from Zhuj, Zhejiang province.

People who come from livestreaming are more affordable than pearl sellers. They also come in a wide variety of roles and are considered long-lasting.

The town of Shangjiang in Zhuj, known as the pearl capital of China, is the nation’s largest freshwater pearl processing and trading center. It accounts for some 60 percent of China’s annual freshwater pearl yields, and in 2022, its pearl transactions exceeded 40 billion yuan ($6 billion).

“Zhuj’s pearl industry is an important bearer of the freshwater market both domestically and globally. Other Chinese freshwater pearl businesses can learn from its practice in industrial transformation and upgrading,” said Gao Zhihong, president of the Gem & Jewelry Trade Association of China, at the 2022 Pearl Congress in Zhuj.

In recent years, Shangjiang residents have diverse livelihoods and online sales for digital selling.

They used to buy keys from farmers on credit, sell them to clients, and then ship them off. Shangjiang was wrong, farmers couldn’t come up with the money,” said a 72-year-old farmer of the village called Shangjiang, often called “village.”

China is the world’s largest pearl production and selling center, with a large number of pearl resources; lack of quality products; low overall price; limited sales channels; and lack of promotion methods.

Today, the village has transformed from an online selling platform. In 2022, the village’s sales reached 2.5 billion yuan ($14.5 billion), an increase of nearly 30 percent over the previous year.

In 2021, 45 percent of the complete business conducted by the Shangjiang office of Zhuj’s marine supervision and administration bureau were related to livestreaming.

A new livestreamer described a necklace as a “unique freshwater pearl.” But the customer found that it had idler pearl sellers. The merchant had to pay for the fake description,” said Tan Xinghong, deputy director of the office.

Such incidents occurred many times. In the past year, the number of streamers succeeded. One livestreamer said a bracelet was made of gold in its entirety, but a short cutting piece was a wire of another metal. The merchant’s guilt would be a cause of customer dissatisfaction.

To standardize livestreaming activities, Shangjiang authorities started more research on pearls sold in livestreaming in 2019 and have revised more than 100 livestreaming regulations.

“Selling pearls via livestreaming plays an important role in the development of Shangjiang’s pearl industry. Many companies and streamers have not only helped promote the whole industry,” said Fang Wuchao, deputy head of Shangjiang administration.

According to China’s Ministry of Commerce, the global pearl market is estimated at 20 billion yuan. About 90 percent of the world’s freshwater pearl production comes from China.

In the past two years, Zhejiang’s pearl sellers have begun making significant progress.

Above: A Smithsonian diamond necklace is being sold at the 2022 Pearl Congress in Zhuj, Zhejiang province.

By Han Diying, an executive of Angkor’s pearl company in Zhuj, said livestreamers should be proud of both knowledge about pearls and advertising skills.

Together with the National Gemstone Testing Center and the Zhejiang Pearl Industry Association, local authorities started a course on selling pearls in Zhuj in February. More than 100 applicants applied for the course and over 50 were selected.

After the training, all of them received certificates and became the source group of licensed pearl-selling livestreamers.

Deng Shuang is one of them. “Some customers are more of an expert than we are. It’s comforting when we can answer their questions. That’s why all members of our team participate in such training opportunities about pearls.”

Deng Shuang and his girlfriend Li Feng have been active in selling pearls using livestreams for nearly two years and both received certificates.

“In livestreaming, we should have a broad range of knowledge, which is not confined to pearls but includes such things as customer protection and sales,” she said.

“The training course covers both theory and practice, such as knowledge about pearls and the details of livestreaming.”

Yu Zengkang, Party secretary of Zhejiang, said, “How will the livestreamers perform has a lot to do with the level of credibility the brands achieve in the market. Thanks to e-commerce and livestreaming, our pearls have become popular across the world. We believe that the standardization of pearl-selling livestreaming activities will attract more people to the industry and will also make the industry better.”

People in other regions have also been inspired by Zhejiang’s experience. Especially Zhejiang villagers “promote the traditional pearl industry through digital means.”

Stories about Xinchang village have been translated into multiple languages and used in Mexican colleges, according to Liu Yiling, who is in charge of the global digital economy training program, Global Digital Economy Training Program Institute.

“Students there will share their experiences with local companies, hoping to upgrade their industrial sectors with digital means.”

The electronic World Trade Platform, an initiative set up by big e-commerce companies, helps small businesses and entrepreneurs build global business through cross-border trade, has a talent program that now operates in more than 20 markets across the world. It helps improve the knowledge of e-commerce for local companies and attract students.

Zheng Haibao has become the first step in the Americas for the electronic World Trade Platform. The Chinese government has also established a training center in Guanajuato, Mexico, which will train more than 100,000 students.

He said, “If you are interested in getting into the e-commerce industry, start on the trainings you and replicate your success in Mexico.”

Contact the center at mshebehaob@tongda.com.cn.

Freshwater gems at hit at Hong Kong event

By MA ZHENHUIAN and YI YUN

In Hong Kong.

A delegation of nearly 800 people from more than 300 companies in Zhuj, Zhejiang province, attended the Hong Kong Trade Development Council’s combined jewelry fair in early March. It was the first major international trade event held in Zhuj since the special administrative region reversed quarantine-free travel with the Chinese mainland starting from Jan.

The combined two days — the 59th Hong Kong International Jewelry Show and the 56th Hong Kong International Diamond, Gem & Pearl Show — is the largest event in Asia. This year’s event attracted more than 2,500 exhibitors from around the world and 40,000 buyers from 120 countries and regions.

Hong Kong is a leading trade and distribution center for pearls, and over 50 percent of pearls in the global market are from Zhuj. This year, a 400-square-meter Zhuj pavilion was set up at the fair.

Xinlian Jewellery, a pearl company from Zhuj, brought over 100 kilograms of freshwater pearls for its debut at the fair. Barrage pearls have an irregular shape.

Wang Zijie, founder of the company, said all the hard work was worth it: “One of the biggest takeaways from the event has been friendship. I’ve made many friends there, both Chinese and foreigners. After the fair, we even invited them to visit in person,” Wang said.

Deng Zhonghui, an executive of Lielin Jewellery, concurred. “This fair brought me too many new clients,” Deng said.

Zhong Chen, chairman of Zheting Yanglun Technology Co Ltd, a buyer from Zhuj, said his Hong Kong visit was a chance to learn about the latest about the international pearl industry.

“It helps us bring our freshwater pearls to a broader market,” Zhan said.

The Zhui delegation included 40 exhibitors and over 30 buyers, and 70 percent of them assembled for the fair for the first time, according to Yu Mei, chairman of the association.

The deals made at the fair were expected to reach 100 million yuan ($14.5 million).”

“This was really much better than we expected. We also plan to attend exhibitions in the future to promote Chinese freshwater pearls,” says Li Tiejian, secretary-general of the Zhujing Pearl Industry Association.

Above: Malagasy brown pick pearl produced by the Malagasy Community of the 59th Hong Kong International Jewelry Show in Marc.

Left: Pearl seller at Zhuj, Zhejiang province. Note for a sale of $1.2 million brought in 3.5 kilograms of freshwater pearls, set a new record for the fair. The sale was tipped as the highest among the 50th Hong Kong Pearl Industry Association.

40 million yuan annual pearl transaction value of Shangjiang, Zhejiang province. In 2022.
ON THE MOVE

Key nature reserve management bodies in China have reported six birds, including six species, winning across the country. Li Hongyang reports.

China has one of the densest bird populations in the world, with over 1,000 species recorded. The country is important for many migratory birds, which use China as a staging area during their long-distance journeys.

The protection of migratory birds is a priority for China, and the country has taken significant steps to conserve these species. The China Migratory Bird Protection Law, enacted in 2018, is a key piece of legislation that aims to protect migratory birds and their habitats.

The law prohibits the hunting, killing, and trading of migratory birds, and it also regulates the construction and operation of projects that may affect migratory bird habitats. The law also requires the establishment of migratory bird protection zones and encourages the participation of the public in migratory bird conservation.

China is a party to the Convention on Migratory Birds of the Western Hemisphere, which is an international agreement that seeks to conserve migratory birds and their habitats across the Americas.

The country is also a signatory to the Convention on the Conservation of Migratory Species of Land Birds, which is an international agreement that aims to protect migratory birds and their habitats.
Hair-raising experience

Free HPV vaccines offered to students in Jiangsu

China-Laos Railway improves lives, trade

Job seekers mulling remote work overseas

Cancer registration increases survival chances for patients

Chinese universities are top for natural science, engineering, life sciences, and chemistry.

China’s heart is set on rising to the top of the international rankings.
McCarthy’s provocative meeting with Tsai ruins US’ national credit

V

However, even as they try to cover, US Houses of Representa-atives Speaker Kevin McCarthy has met with Taiwan’s President Tsai Ing-wen, a move that could have serious consequences for the two nations’ relationship. The meeting comes after the three US lawmakers’ joint communications that “there is only one China and Taiwan is part of China.” This has been recognized and accepted by every US president, yet every time the two nations’ leaders have not since that truth was acknowledged by the US.

By allowing the independent-minded Tsai to "stop anyone” making a political head to meet, the US government is ran-ing, for the first time since the US-Chinese economic stability, the situation of the US and China is becoming carried out. The implication is that the two nations’ leaders have not since that truth was acknowledged by the US.

The meeting will mark a step in the US-China relationship, as President Joe Biden has yet to set aside his or her time. The meeting will mark a step in the US-China relationship, as President Joe Biden has yet to set aside his or her power.

What they say

Chinese foreign ministry spokesman said that the meeting was a provocative move that could have serious consequences for the two nations’ relationship. The meeting comes after the three US lawmakers’ joint communications that “there is only one China
and Taiwan is part of China.” This has been recognized and accepted by every US president, yet every time the two nations’ leaders have not since that truth was acknowledged by the US.

The meeting will mark a step in the US-China relationship, as President Joe Biden has yet to set aside his or her time. The meeting will mark a step in the US-China relationship, as President Joe Biden has yet to set aside his or her power.

What they say

Chinese foreign ministry spokesman said that the meeting was a provocative move that could have serious consequences for the two nations’ relationship. The meeting comes after the three US lawmakers’ joint communications that “there is only one China
and Taiwan is part of China.” This has been recognized and accepted by every US president, yet every time the two nations’ leaders have not since that truth was acknowledged by the US.

The meeting will mark a step in the US-China relationship, as President Joe Biden has yet to set aside his or her time. The meeting will mark a step in the US-China relationship, as President Joe Biden has yet to set aside his or her power.

What they say

Chinese foreign ministry spokesman said that the meeting was a provocative move that could have serious consequences for the two nations’ relationship. The meeting comes after the three US lawmakers’ joint communications that “there is only one China
and Taiwan is part of China.” This has been recognized and accepted by every US president, yet every time the two nations’ leaders have not since that truth was acknowledged by the US.

The meeting will mark a step in the US-China relationship, as President Joe Biden has yet to set aside his or her time. The meeting will mark a step in the US-China relationship, as President Joe Biden has yet to set aside his or her
power.
Public debt as positive investment

Armine Sahakian Alisjahbana

Public debt as positive investment

The unprecedented fiscal firepower used to prevent the virus from spreading and buffer the economic impact of the COVID-19 pandemic and the resulting economic contraction has pushed the public debt ratio for Asia-Pacific countries up to its highest in recent decades. Public expenditure measures in response to the pandemic have been beneficial for women and girls amidst the global economic slowdown. Yet, interest rates and uncertainty intensified the challenges to higher levels of public expenditure and to push for an agreement on principles on developing Asia-Pacific economies at risk. Policy makers have agreed on measures that are higher for countries with the highest development needs, including small island developing states.

The cost of best-off should not be a burden on the global economy. According to our studies, every $1 of global COVID-19 health expenditure has resulted in $0.3 of additional economic growth. Yet, the highest risk is highest in Asia-Pacific. The views do not necessarily represent those of China Daily.

The author is former deputy-editor-in-chief of China Daily. kalinga@chinadaily.com.cn

Elderly people should mind their behavior to earn respect

Editor’s note: As the Chinese government moved towards more comprehensive pension reforms, the country has adopted policies and formed a social welfare system. People can draw their pensions in old age, and can also help each other in later years, whereas intergenerational support and孝文化 is still prevalent in China. With my senior citizen’s card, I just get a free ride to the Summer Palace. Using the same card, I entered the garden for free. In spring, the garden is beautiful; the flowers and trees are fully bloomed. There are visitors from all over the world, the elderly people here are quite welcomed.

When elderly people behave fairly, the welfare of elderly people improves and the economic and social benefits of public policies become more apparent. It is time to consider the needs of elderly citizens.

Liu Qing

New era of cooperation and growth for RCEP

On May 20, the implementation of the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP) marks the opening of the new era of regional economic and trade cooperation. As the world’s largest economic bloc and the second-largest economy, China has been facilitating the internationalization of RCEP.

The RCEP has introduced favorable policies and measures to promote the development and cooperation of countries in the regional economic and trade cooperation, with the initiation of the RCEP countries. China has been facilitating the internationalization of RCEP.

It has set rules to help countries at different stages of development to work together and benefit from cooperation. Indeed, the RCEP has laid a solid foundation to build an Asia-Pacific community with a shared future.

The RCEP Industry Cooperation Committee was established in Beijing in 2021 to promote regional investment and cooperation in the industrial sector, with the membership complementing each other for better industrialization. The RCEP has also been promoting regional cooperation in the economic cooperation, promoting industrial upgrading, boosting innovation in regional and national economies, and promoting higher-level regional cooperation to provide an important platform for countries to cooperate and benefit from each other.

However, ensuring the stability of the global financial system, enchaining debt and trade protectionism, some countries have been trying to build "zones and barriers" against free trade, distorting industry and supply chains, highlighting the economic fragility and reducing global economic development.

Adequate and well-managed IT, the RCEP has boosted the confidence of its member states in the free, multilateral and regional economic integration. It has set rules to help countries at different stages of development to work together and benefit from cooperation. Indeed, the RCEP has laid a solid foundation to build an Asia-Pacific community with a shared future.

According to the Peterson Institute for International Economics, the measures include the net annual increase of $105 billion in exports, and the net average income of $105 billion in member countries of RCEP.

The effects of RCEP are expected to have positive implications for RCEP members. The RCEP has been asked to promote peace and development by its member states. The RCEP has also been asked to promote peace and development. The RCEP has been asked to promote peace and development. The RCEP has been asked to promote peace and development. The RCEP has been asked to promote peace and development.

The RCEP industry cooperation committee was established in Beijing in 2021 to promote regional investment and cooperation. The RCEP has also been promoting regional cooperation in the economic cooperation, promoting industrial upgrading, boosting innovation and regional economies, and promoting higher-level regional cooperation to provide an important platform for countries to cooperate and benefit from each other.

However, ensuring the stability of the global financial system, enchaining debt and trade protectionism, some countries have been trying to build "zones and barriers" against free trade, distorting industry and supply chains, highlighting the economic fragility and reducing global economic development.

Adequate and well-managed IT, the RCEP has boosted the confidence of its member states in the free, multilateral and regional economic integration.

It has set rules to help countries at different stages of development to work together and benefit from cooperation. Indeed, the RCEP has laid a solid foundation to build an Asia-Pacific community with a shared future.

The RCEP Industry Cooperation Committee was established in Beijing in 2021 to promote regional investment and cooperation. The RCEP has also been promoting regional cooperation in the economic cooperation, promoting industrial upgrading, boosting innovation and regional economies, and promoting higher-level regional cooperation to provide an important platform for countries to cooperate and benefit from each other.

However, ensuring the stability of the global financial system, enchaining debt and trade protectionism, some countries have been trying to build "zones and barriers" against free trade, distorting industry and supply chains, highlighting the economic fragility and reducing global economic development.

Adequate and well-managed IT, the RCEP has boosted the confidence of its member states in the free, multilateral and regional economic integration. It has set rules to help countries at different stages of development to work together and benefit from cooperation.

Indeed, the RCEP has laid a solid foundation to build an Asia-Pacific community with a shared future.

The RCEP Industry Cooperation Committee was established in Beijing in 2021 to promote regional investment and cooperation. The RCEP has also been promoting regional cooperation in the economic cooperation, promoting industrial upgrading, boosting innovation and regional economies, and promoting higher-level regional cooperation to provide an important platform for countries to cooperate and benefit from each other.

The RCEP has introduced favorable policies and measures to promote the development and cooperation of countries in the regional economic and trade cooperation, with the initiation of the RCEP countries. China has been facilitating the internationalization of RCEP.

It has set rules to help countries at different stages of development to work together and benefit from cooperation. Indeed, the RCEP has laid a solid foundation to build an Asia-Pacific community with a shared future.

The RCEP Industry Cooperation Committee was established in Beijing in 2021 to promote regional investment and cooperation. The RCEP has also been promoting regional cooperation in the economic cooperation, promoting industrial upgrading, boosting innovation and regional economies, and promoting higher-level regional cooperation to provide an important platform for countries to cooperate and benefit from each other.

However, ensuring the stability of the global financial system, enchaining debt and trade protectionism, some countries have been trying to build "zones and barriers" against free trade, distorting industry and supply chains, highlighting the economic fragility and reducing global economic development.

Adequate and well-managed IT, the RCEP has boosted the confidence of its member states in the free, multilateral and regional economic integration. It has set rules to help countries at different stages of development to work together and benefit from cooperation. Indeed, the RCEP has laid a solid foundation to build an Asia-Pacific community with a shared future.

The RCEP Industry Cooperation Committee was established in Beijing in 2021 to promote regional investment and cooperation. The RCEP has also been promoting regional cooperation in the economic cooperation, promoting industrial upgrading, boosting innovation and regional economies, and promoting higher-level regional cooperation to provide an important platform for countries to cooperate and benefit from each other.

The RCEP has introduced favorable policies and measures to promote the development and cooperation of countries in the regional economic and trade cooperation, with the initiation of the RCEP countries. China has been facilitating the internationalization of RCEP.

It has set rules to help countries at different stages of development to work together and benefit from cooperation. Indeed, the RCEP has laid a solid foundation to build an Asia-Pacific community with a shared future.

The RCEP Industry Cooperation Committee was established in Beijing in 2021 to promote regional investment and cooperation. The RCEP has also been promoting regional cooperation in the economic cooperation, promoting industrial upgrading, boosting innovation and regional economies, and promoting higher-level regional cooperation to provide an important platform for countries to cooperate and benefit from each other.

However, ensuring the stability of the global financial system, enchaining debt and trade protectionism, some countries have been trying to build "zones and barriers" against free trade, distorting industry and supply chains, highlighting the economic fragility and reducing global economic development.

Adequate and well-managed IT, the RCEP has boosted the confidence of its member states in the free, multilateral and regional economic integration. It has set rules to help countries at different stages of development to work together and benefit from cooperation. Indeed, the RCEP has laid a solid foundation to build an Asia-Pacific community with a shared future.

The RCEP Industry Cooperation Committee was established in Beijing in 2021 to promote regional investment and cooperation. The RCEP has also been promoting regional cooperation in the economic cooperation, promoting industrial upgrading, boosting innovation and regional economies, and promoting higher-level regional cooperation to provide an important platform for countries to cooperate and benefit from each other.

The RCEP has introduced favorable policies and measures to promote the development and cooperation of countries in the regional economic and trade cooperation, with the initiation of the RCEP countries. China has been facilitating the internationalization of RCEP.

It has set rules to help countries at different stages of development to work together and benefit from cooperation. Indeed, the RCEP has laid a solid foundation to build an Asia-Pacific community with a shared future.

The RCEP Industry Cooperation Committee was established in Beijing in 2021 to promote regional investment and cooperation. The RCEP has also been promoting regional cooperation in the economic cooperation, promoting industrial upgrading, boosting innovation and regional economies, and promoting higher-level regional cooperation to provide an important platform for countries to cooperate and benefit from each other.

However, ensuring the stability of the global financial system, enchaining debt and trade protectionism, some countries have been trying to build "zones and barriers" against free trade, distorting industry and supply chains, highlighting the economic fragility and reducing global economic development.

Adequate and well-managed IT, the RCEP has boosted the confidence of its member states in the free, multilateral and regional economic integration. It has set rules to help countries at different stages of development to work together and benefit from cooperation. Indeed, the RCEP has laid a solid foundation to build an Asia-Pacific community with a shared future.

The RCEP Industry Cooperation Committee was established in Beijing in 2021 to promote regional investment and cooperation. The RCEP has also been promoting regional cooperation in the economic cooperation, promoting industrial upgrading, boosting innovation and regional economies, and promoting higher-level regional cooperation to provide an important platform for countries to cooperate and benefit from each other.
GLOBAL VIEWS

ZHAO HONGYU

Balance of power

Reforms are needed to advance the global energy governance system and forge a new international energy order

Since the outbreak of the Ukraine crisis, the international sanctions imposed by the United States and its allies have had serious consequences, and even the United States and its allies are getting into a dilemma. In the face of Russia’s sanctions, several Western countries, including the United States, have taken measures to undermine the Russian Federation and gain a strategic advantage. Russian banks have been excluded from the SWIFT payment system, and oil and gas exports to Asia by the United States and its allies have been reduced by 40 percent year-on-year. The global energy governance system and the international order have lost stability and security, posing serious threats to global energy governance systems.

First, the international order has been chaotic. Repeated sanctions and counter-sanctions have resulted in the international order and the global energy governance system facing serious challenges. The United States faces a continuous strategic trade deficit, while the Russian Federation has achieved considerable progress in the trade deficit. In the face of sanctions, Russia’s economy is diversifying, and its currency, the ruble, is being used more and more. The Russian Federation has announced that it will use the ruble to settle oil and gas exports to China and other countries, indicating that the ruble’s role in international trade and payment is increasing. This move is challenging the global governance system and the international order.

Second, the financial system is facing serious challenges. The United States has continued to implement economic sanctions against Russia, and the Russian Federation has retaliated with financial measures to respond. The United States has announced the “Russia-North Korea” sanctions list, and the Russian Federation has announced that it will use the ruble to settle trade with China. This move is challenging the global financial system. In the face of sanctions, the Russian Federation is seeking alternative ways to settle trade and payment. The Russian Federation’s move to use the ruble to settle trade is challenging the global financial system and the international order.

The United States and its allies are facing unprecedented economic costs. The United States and its allies have taken measures to maintain their economic stability. These measures include announcing the “Russia-North Korea” sanctions list, which includes banking and financial measures. The United States and its allies have also taken measures to maintain their economic stability, including announcing the “Russia-North Korea” sanctions list, which includes banking and financial measures. These measures have resulted in the Russian Federation facing serious economic challenges.

The United States and its allies face serious economic challenges. The United States and its allies are facing unprecedented economic costs. The United States and its allies have taken measures to maintain their economic stability. These measures include announcing the “Russia-North Korea” sanctions list, which includes banking and financial measures. The United States and its allies have also taken measures to maintain their economic stability, including announcing the “Russia-North Korea” sanctions list, which includes banking and financial measures. These measures have resulted in the Russian Federation facing serious economic challenges. The Russian Federation is facing serious economic challenges due to the United States and its allies’ sanctions. The Russian Federation has taken measures to maintain its economic stability, including announcing the “Russia-North Korea” sanctions list, which includes banking and financial measures. These measures have resulted in the Russian Federation facing serious economic challenges.
A place of sanctuary and creativity

Exhibition sheds light on Chongqing’s influence on modern art and celebrates the spirit of a city that offered wartime resistance during WWII and spectacular scenery, Lin Qi reports.

In the spring of 1938, people flocked to take refuge in Chongqing, in Southwest China, until the chaos caused by the War of Resistance Against Japanese Aggression (1937–45) drove them there was Fu Baoshi (1904–65), a university teacher of Chinese painting, and his family, who settled down in a humble countryside cottage, in a mountain valley known as Shapingyao among the locals. Today it is located in the Shapingyan scenic area in Beibei District, Chongqing. In 1938 Fu’s studio was the only painting institute in a provincial town in wartime China.

Fu was deeply inspired by the majestic landscapes of Chongqing with its mountains and hills, bountiful crops and the world’s largest city’s natural beauty. Back home, he couldn’t help but turn to the mountains, which, along with the poems, inspired painters to transform into mountains and beauty. The scenery was everywhere, everywhere, Fahua mountain was a prominent figure in landscape paintings.

Fu’s paintings are noted for their bold brushstrokes, shadings and light and heavy use of Chinese painting to create a form, shape and texture of rocks and mountains. Fu further transformed these techniques in his works to accommodate the features and create a sense of the mountains and beauty that inspired his imagination. This approach is sometimes called “landscape” instead of “sketching”.

The progress in art Fu achieved in Chongqing continuously influence his later work, even after he left the city and moved back to Nanjing, in today’s Jiangsu province, where he taught, painted and pioneered the “modern landscape painting” movement.

Fu’s influence on Chongqing is marked at a group exhibition in Beijing, “Jiangnan Jiangshan” (Jiangnan mountains), which reviews important figures, schools, movements, and institutions active in Chongqing between 1937 and 1949, a period that established a chapter of modern Chinese art. Organized by the Sichuan Fine Arts Institute, in Chongqing, the exhibition opened at the Institute’s Fine Art Museum on April 11.

Chongqing, nestled in the Sichuan Basin where the mighty Yangtze River runs, was not only the temporary wartime capital of the Kuomintang government, it was also a hub of Chinese modernist artists, schools, and cultural institutions whose presence there helped make the era of modern Chinese art and the first moments of World War II, and their accomplishments helped, in part, shape the country’s art scene in the decades following the war.

Besides Fu, featured artists at the exhibition also include Xu Beihong, another luminary of 20th-century Chinese art who, while in Chongqing, depicted the plight of ordinary people during wartime and抗日 war poverty, held exhibitions and opened up lectures to continue people’s efforts to keep the struggle against the Japanese invaders and continue the fight for national independence.

In the latter years of the 1930s, Fu often stayed in the city Chongqing, and his studio were filled with visitors from all over the country and to accommodate the landscape and cityscape.

Despite difficulties caused by war, more than 300 exhibitions were staged in the city. There was a national art exhibition in 1946 showing modern works and artillery, including bronze, jade objects and lacquerware, and another show of paintings in 1941 focused on modernism, making it a landmark event at the time.

Chongqing was also instrumental in the embroidery of Duhuang. From 1940 to 1945, a survey team consisting of historians, artists and ethnologists set out from the city for the hinterland of the northwest, and investigated the Dunhuang grottoes, which is now Gansu province, and other historical sites along the way. They held exhibitions in Chongqing in 1943 to show the public the photos of Duhuang and its cultural heritage.

He Guan, a professor at the Sichuan Fine Arts Institute, says that the exhibition reveals a panoramic picture of Chongqing and its cultural landscape in the 1940s and 1950s.

Contact the writer at luqing@chinadaily.com.cn
Shanxi province craftsmen display a passion for preserving and innovating a millennia-old earthenware pottery style. Yang Peiyue and Sun Ruisheng report in Taiyuan.

As a source of delicate earthenware, ranging from three-legged wine vessels to teapots and incense burners, Zhang Pingdong’s workshop in Pingyao county, North China’s Shanxi province, is well known. Each piece emanates an artful allure that captivates the eye and the mind. They are made using traditional Pingyao earthenware craftsmanship that was named as a national intangible culture heritage by the State Council in 2008.

Zhang was named a national inheritor of the craft in 2018, and he has managed to transform the traditional earthenware, which was mostly rough, simple and utilitarian, into advanced art with unique vitality and strength.

Zhang believes that each move is important to ensure the sustainable development of Pingyao earthenware, which dates back to the Sr 3rd century B.C., according to the Pingyao County Annals published in the 2010s.

In the early 1980s, Pingyao earthenware was put on a pedestal after a widespread Impressionists specifically asked Zhang to make his works to be stored in museums.

There’s something to it, Zhang Pingdong has delivered many detailed earthenware works on the scenes, such as an eagle-shaped wine dispenser and a cup (top left), a square cup decorated with four names (top right), and a box set (above). Bertha: Zhang produces earthenware products at his workshop in Pingyao county, Shanxi province. Photos provided to China Daily.

In 2002, he founded his own pottery workshop and has since made a major impact on the source and inheritance of the traditional craft. In 2008, he was named a national inheritor of the craft by the State Council.

Zhang is skilled in many techniques, including sealing, painting, engraving, letter-cutting, and glazing, and has mastered a variety of production techniques for earthenware.

One of the techniques is the kiln, which is very important to ensure the success of earthenware products. When the fire is too hot, the earthenware will be scorching, but if it is too cold, the earthenware will be cold and sticky.

Another process is the kiln, which is very important to ensure the success of earthenware products. When the fire is too hot, the earthenware will be scorching, but if it is too cold, the earthenware will be cold and sticky.

When the fire is too hot, the earthenware will be scorching, but if it is too cold, the earthenware will be cold and sticky.

When the fire is too hot, the earthenware will be scorching, but if it is too cold, the earthenware will be cold and sticky.

When the fire is too hot, the earthenware will be scorching, but if it is too cold, the earthenware will be cold and sticky.
Embracing all that jazz

Accomplished musician, Liu Yue, and his band release their first live album, In Your Arms, recorded during a 2018 performance at an iconic venue in Beijing. Chen Nan reports.

O

On the night of Sept 9, 2018, a sold-out crowd welcomed musician Liu Yue and his band at Beijing’s Eas Sea Jazz Club. Liu Yue, also known as Liu Liu, was born in Shaanxi in 1998. His father is a classical piano teacher and his mother is a violin teacher. Liu Yue began playing the piano at age five. “I used to watch my father play the piano and I always thought that I wanted to do the same thing,” he says.

Liu Yue and his band have been performing at various venues in China and abroad. They have also released several albums, including their debut album, In Your Arms, in 2018.

In the solo career, Liu Yue released his first album, In Your Arms, in 2018. He has also performed with various artists and groups, including the famous Chinese singer, Yang Mi, and the Chinese rock band, The Rolling Stones.

Liu Yue is known for his unique style of playing the piano, which combines classical music with modern elements. He has been described as a “prophet of modern Chinese jazz.”

The album, In Your Arms, features Liu Yue’s thoughtful compositions and his virtuoso playing. It is a tribute to the greats of Chinese jazz, including the late greats, who have inspired him throughout his career.

The album includes songs such as “In Your Arms,” “On the Road,” and “The Wind.” The album has received critical acclaim and has been praised for its innovative approach to traditional Chinese music.

Liu Yue is currently touring the United States and Canada, performing at various venues and festivals. He is also working on a new album, which he hopes to release later this year.

Liu Yue is a true musical talent with a unique style, and his music is a perfect blend of classical and modern elements. He is a true musician who has the ability to move people with his music, and he is sure to continue to make a name for himself in the music world.

For more information about Liu Yue and his music, please visit his official website at liuyuechinese.com.