Subject: Brazil"s First Lady amongst COP30 Special Envoys Available to be Interviewed
Date: Monday, September 22, 2025 9:07:39 AM

Hi [redacted],

I wanted to share an interview opportunity spotlighting the women leaders shaping COP30. As special envoys and influential voices, these women are driving global climate action across business, diplomacy, gender equity, and the just transition. In the lead-up to COP, they can offer unique insights into how women's leadership is advancing inclusive climate solutions. Notable spokespeople available for interviews include:

- Brazil's First Lady Janja – can speak to her policy efforts to combat gender violence, food insecurity, and hunger, and to increase women's political participation.
- Denisa Dora – a longtime advocate for women's rights and civic engagement, she can address how feminist movements are shaping inclusive climate policy.
- Jurema Werneck – a physician and human rights leader, she highlights the intersection of racial equity, health, and climate justice.
- Sineia do Vale – an Indigenous leader from Roraima, she brings firsthand perspective on protecting the Amazon and integrating traditional knowledge into climate solutions.
- Marina Grossi – as head of the Brazilian Business Council for Sustainable Development (CEBDS), she has been instrumental in aligning business ambition with COP30's agenda.
- Elba Gannoun – a seasoned diplomat, she offers insight into Brazil's role in international negotiations and its approach to climate diplomacy.

Should you be interested, they are available for in-person interview at 7pm in New York this evening. Apologies for the quick turnaround - happy to forward additional details upon confirmation.

Best,
[redacted]
