A Call for Ethics in Global Environmental Decision-Making ahead of Climate Week NYC

Press conference following last of six international global dialogues brings climate conversations to the people through a moral, ethical and cultural lens

On September 19th, at 1:15 p.m. (local time), the minister of the Environment and Climate Change of Brazil, Marina Silva; the founder and executive director of the Center for Earth Ethics, Karennia Gore; and the president of COP30, Ambassador André Corrêa do Lago will hold a press conference to present the outcomes of the North America Dialogue of the Global Ethical Stocktake (GES). The event will take place at the American Museum of Natural History in New York City ahead of Climate Week.

As one of the key mobilization pillars of COP30, the GES brings a moral lens to the urgent climate actions humanity must undertake in alignment with science and the Paris Agreement goal of limiting global temperature rise to 1.5°C above pre-industrial levels.

Inspired by the Paris Agreement's Global Stocktake, the GES seeks to reflect on the progress made so far, identify the path forward, and foster the behavioral and collective transformations required for a shared ethical commitment to implementing existing technical solutions.

The GES unfolds through a series of six Regional Dialogues that are happening across continents until October. The North America Dialogue, in NYC, will close the circle. The others took place in London, UK (Europe); Bogota, Colombia (South and Central America and the Caribbean); New Delhi, India (Asia); Addis Ababa, Ethiopia (Africa); and Sydney, Australia (Oceania).

Each region has a co-leader responsible for promoting and coordinating the principles, objectives, and implementation of the GES. In North America, the position is held by Karenna Gore.

Other co-leaders include former President of Ireland, Mary Robinson (Europe), former President of Chile, Michelle Bachelet (South and Central America and the Caribbean), Nobel Peace Prize laureate Kailash Satyarthi (Asia), managing director for Africa & Global Partnerships at the World Resources Institute (WRI), Wanjira Mathai (Africa), and former President of Kiribati, Anote Tong (Oceania).

Led by Brazilian President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva and UN Secretary-General António Guterres, the GES will produce six regional reports and a synthesis report to be presented at the Pre-COP in Brasília this October. These documents will be submitted to the COP30 Presidency to help inform decision-making processes and guide heads of state and climate negotiators.

In addition to the Regional Dialogues, the GES is supported by Self-Organized Dialogues led by civil society organizations and national and subnational governments, all following the same methodology and guiding principles.
