Trials Qualifiers Running For A Bigger Cause Than The Olympics

BOTHELL, Wash. -- Brooks sponsored athletes running in the Olympic Marathon trials will be running in honor of a patient with leukemia from their hometown in partnership with Leukemia Society of America.

Each runner will have the child's initials they have dedicated the race for silk screened on their singlet. Also, during the trials the athletes will be wearing a "Team in Training" pin with an attached purple ribbon on their street clothes to symbolize this special partnership.

Before the athletes left their home towns, they met the child in whose honor they will be running. It has been very inspiring during a hectic training period for the athletes to meet these children. The children are thrilled that an athlete of this caliber will be competing for a spot on the Olympic Team in their honor. "It has been very motivational for me to meet Jeremy, a ten year old with leukemia, who has much greater battles to fight than I do," said Regina Joyce, a Brooks athlete competing in the trials.

Brooks is committed to heighten the awareness of Leukemia Society of America's efforts. The Team in Training program does just that by reaching a large number of runners across the country. This program raises money for a child and supports the sport of running.

Through the combined efforts of the athlete, the patient, Brooks and the Leukemia Society of America, there will certainly be a lot of winners at the trials regardless of the times that are posted.

The Women's Marathon trials will be in Columbia, South Carolina on February 10th and the Men's trials will be held February 17th in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Brooks recently entered into a three-year partnership with the Leukemia Society of America to sponsor their Team in Training program.

Brooks Sports distributes athletic footwear, apparel and accessories in more than 80 countries worldwide. The company's headquarters are located at 11720 North Creek Parkway, Bothell, Wash., 98011, near Seattle.

BROOKS SPORTS JAMMIN' WITH SAXOPHONE CLUB AND THE PRESIDENT

SEATTLE -- Brooks Sports linked up with the Saxophone Club, celebrities, elected officials, KeyBank, and local restaurants for a "jam session" fund-raiser during President Clinton's Sept. 18 visit to Seattle.

Nearly 3,000 people drank lattes, dined on spit-roasted pork loin with black bean sauce, and jammed to a rhythm and blues band that featured several saxophonists in honor of President Clinton.

All-star "jam session" celebrities included actor Tom Skerritt, Jerry Cantrell of Alice in Chains, Steve Berlin of Los Lobos, Howard Leese and Ann Wilson of Heart, and rhythm and blues favorite Junior Cadillac.

The Saxophone Club is composed of nearly 3,000 members nationwide, and originated in 1992 in support of President Clinton and the Democratic Party. Club chapters exist in Washington, New York, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and Houston.

Brooks Sports distributes athletic footwear, apparel and accessories in more than 80 countries. The company's headquarter's are located at 11720 North Creek Parkway North, Bothell, near Seattle.
