Happy Independence Day

A Letter From Ireland

a Chara,

A short letter this week to wish you a happy Independence Day.

65 nations across the world celebrate independence from Britain, we look forward to Ireland making it 66!!

In the meantime, we have to fight a British General election and are contesting for seats in the north of Ireland. By the time you read this, the results will be in.

It is anticipated that a new British Government will be elected with the Labour Party forming a government after 14 years of Tory rule.

Greg and I will provide a quick readout of the results when they are known. Have a great weekend and enjoy your independence. I know we will.

Is mise,

Ciarán

In this election, every vote will count - O'Neill

Sinn Féin Vice President Michelle O'Neill was out on the doors this week in the run up to Thursday's election. She said, "In this election, every vote will count in Fermanagh and South Tyrone.

"I was delighted to join with the formidable Pat Cullen as we met with workers and families, setting out our vision for a brighter and better future for Fermanagh and South Tyrone.

"As a nurse and former leader of the Nursing Union, Pat knows what it means to stand up for ordinary workers.

"Pat will champion the interests of everyone in Fermanagh and South Tyrone as your MP.

soon enough, so that the people can have the choice who leads the next government.

Speaking in the Dáil, during the nomination of the next Finance Minister, Teachta McDonald said, “We are now in the end game of this government. A government that marked the long awaited consummation of the Fine Gael Fianna Fail partnership; parties in government together since 2016; parties that have held power individually and together since the foundation of the state. Parties who above all else display a total commitment and belief to staying in power.

“Today as one Minister moves on and another moves in, one thing is certain – everything will remain exactly the same. That is the present reality. That must change.
