III—ACTIVITIES

11. During this 6 month reporting period, have you engaged in any activities for or rendered any services to any foreign principal named in Items 8, 9, and 10 of this statement? Yes ☒ No ☐

If yes, identify each such foreign principal and describe in full detail your activities and services:

The registrant (Shrum, Devine & Donilon) assisted the foreign principal (Mr. Antonini) with matters related to a visit to the United States by Governor Eduardo Duhalde. This trip occurred April 15-19, 1996. The registrant coordinated the scheduling of Governor Duhalde's meetings and appearances with and before both public and private sector entities. In addition, the registrant provided assistance with advance work for the trip.

[1]The term "foreign principal" includes, in addition to those defined in section 1(b) of the Act, an individual or organization any of whose activities are directly or indirectly supervised, directed, controlled, financed, or subsidized in whole or in major part by a foreign government, foreign political party, foreign organization or foreign individual. (See Rule 100(a)(9)).

A registrant who represents more than one foreign principal is required to list in the statements he files under the Act only those foreign principals for whom he is not entitled to claim exemption under Section 3 of the Act. (See Rule 208.)

12. During this 6 month reporting period, have you on behalf of any foreign principal engaged in political activity[2] as defined below?
Yes ☒ No ☐

If yes, identify each such foreign principal and describe in full detail all such political activity, indicating, among other things, the relations, interests and policies sought to be influenced and the means employed to achieve this purpose. If the registrant arranged, sponsored or delivered speeches, lectures or radio and TV broadcasts, give details as to dates, places of delivery, names of speakers and subject matter.

Registrant did not disseminate "political propaganda" on behalf of the foregin principal. Registrant did draft a speech for Governor Duhalde to present during his visit to the United States. Registrant does not believe that Governor Duhalde actually presented this speech before any given audience, although registrant believes that portions of this speech were presented to various audiences. The final draft of the speech drafted by registrant is attached hereto as Exhibit 1.

Governor Duhalde's complete itinerary is attached hereto as Exhibit 2.

13. In addition to the above described activities, if any, have you engaged in activity on your own behalf which benefits any or all of your foreign principals? Yes ☒ No ☐

If yes, describe fully.

Registrant engages in the business of political consulting, campaign management, media production, and general public relations. Registrant therefore works on behalf of incumbent political figures as well as individuals seeking to reach elected office. In this general representation of American clients, the fact that registrant also represents this foreign principal could reflect favorably upon this foreign principal.

Governor Duhalde did not, to registrant's knowledge, meet with any current clients of registrant during his trip in the United States. Governor Duhalde did meet with Governor Zel Miller of Georgia who has been a client of certain of registrant's principals, although such meeting was not arranged by registrant.

[2]The term "political activities" means the dissemination of political propaganda and any other activity which the person engaging therein believes will, or which he intends to, prevail upon, indoctrinate, convert, induce, persuade, or in any other way influence any agency or official of the Government of the United States or any section of the public within the United States with reference to formulating, adopting, or changing the domestic or foreign policies of the United States or with reference to the political or public interests, policies, or relations of a government of a foreign country or a foreign political party.

DRAFT SPEECH FOR GOVERNOR DUHALDE

Eduardo Duhalde Speech
Draft 3

Thank you for your generous invitation to discuss issues of importance to the people I represent, the people of the province of Buenos Aires.

The timing of this discussion is particularly appropriate since we are now grappling with fundamental issues unprecedented in our history: the cause of economic reform; our place and our passage into the new global economy with its challenges and opportunities.

Let me begin with an overview of our economic reality -- the strengths, the vast potential, and the urgent challenges.

In 1989 the Party Justicialista's presidential ticket - headed by Dr. Carlos Menem - and on which I had the honor of being the Vice Presidential candidate - prevailed in the presidential elections. The economy we inherited in the wake of that election had collapsed: the projected inflation rate was nearly 1000%; our currency had no real value. Our central bank did not have sufficient foreign reserves to cover one week of imports. The very right to private property in Argentina was threatened. Society was disintegrating, democratic institutions were falling apart, and uncertainty and hopelessness spread throughout our country and its people.

The scenario was ripe for retreat from any movement towards the new global economic reality, which had already begun to impose itself with dominate force. We faced the enduring prospect of a massive and burdensome government; the continued existence of an overly closed economy, the burden of regulations and obstacles to the free exercise of economic activity and the distain of stability as a key element for investment.

The situation demanded a restoration of confidence. In a matter of months we had to implement our plan. In order to deal with such chaos, President Menem pursued a series of measures. These were simple, reasonable and efficient: The privatization of public enterprises; the fiscal discipline of balanced budget; the deregulation of domestic economic activity; the opening of our economy and the establishment of a stable currency. The result, or better said, the success of these policies is now obvious to all. Private sector investment and the production of goods and services has grown rapidly. We have embarked upon a program of vast modernization of our infrastructure to enhance our ability to deliver goods to the market place; we have seen a 40% increase in international trade in the last year alone. And what for many was an unimaginable achievement only a few years ago -- Argentina has the second lowest rate of inflation of any country in the world.

None of this has come without sacrifice. The far-reaching structural reforms achieved by the administration provided solutions to a large part of our problems, but some old problems remain and others have only recently appeared. We continue to push for modernization of our financial and banking systems, and our labor laws need to provide increased flexibility for businesses. More recently, the emergence of grave structural unemployment; a by-product of the inexorable fact of modernization that is a shared reality in both emerging and industrialized economies. This is a challenge that must be solved, in our country, as well as in the rest of the world. Forums are opening up to begin to debate and to find ways to remedy this issue, because if allowed to persist into the future, it could threaten the reforms undertaken and therefore democracy itself.

Recently, in Argentina, given the magnitude of the rate of unemployment, some voices have begun to call for a return to protectionism and the old ways that in the past lead to economic demise. We are convinced that if we go back we will relegate ourselves to the margins of progress and economic well being. We are at a point in human history were certain universal truths have become self evident: representative democracy is the best form of government; a free economy is the most efficient means of production; and conflicts between nations can and must be solved in multinational forums, charged with the task and empowered with the means of finding peaceful solutions. History makes clear the path to follow, and it is not in our heart nor in our mind to stray from that trail. We recognize that in order to generate genuine employment there must be investment built on internal and external savings. Our fundamental task as stewards of the economy is to create and maintain conditions that produce investor confidence so that available sources of capital see Argentina as a secure and profitable target for their investment. Our fundamental obligation as elected leaders is to ensure that the economic transition will have the least painful impact on the less privileged members of our society.

This is not the platform of one group, or of one political party. On the contrary, a wide consensus exists that extends throughout our society. Since the beginning of President Menem's administration in 1989, the revival of electoral politics has occurred on all levels - national, provincial, municipal - and constitutional reforms have taken hold. Even though it has been difficult for our people, the structural reforms that have been undertaken have almost inevitably been accompanied by success. After seven years of President Menem's administration, he won reelection with almost 50% of the vote. And our party has achieved majorities in both house of Congress, not only on a national level, but in the majority of provinces and municipalities as well. The reaffirmation of leadership from our people provides the best source of support to preserve and deepen not only our philosophy, but the policies that have been pursued, policies that have allowed us to successfully overcome real and substantial obstacles. This success has bread confidence within our people that those who rescued our country with clear democratic policies and unrestricted personal liberties during one of the most difficult periods of our history, are best able to resolve the present and future challenges we face. Today Argentina's history is being written on the basis of this new marriage of economic reform and political consensus.

Our greatest strength comes from something which is one of our highest priorities and hard won achievements -- political and economic stability. We have built a democracy that is authentic, vibrant, open and resilient. Power passes at the ballot box and in turn determines the behavior of leaders. The debates at the heart of society are free and without constraint. Because of this political stability, Argentinean society has accepted the essential, sometimes drastic and even painful steps which have been taken to transform our economic system in recent years.

Finally, I'd like to mention my Province of Buenos Aires. It has been the cornerstone of our economic and social transformation. Without the support that our people have provided for national policies, the accomplishments that are evident today might not have been achieved.

Our economic progress reaffirms and results from our political stability. In the last election for Governor of Buenos Aires, I received 57% of the vote and my party won majorities in both the province's House of Representatives and in the Senate. One of the keys to our success has been that we have never forgotten that a healthy economic policy begins not with numbers but with people. So while we have balanced our budget and imposed fiscal discipline, we have also insisted that government must invest in infrastructure -- not only for the short term jobs such investments provide, but for the long term prosperity which such investments create.

In the Province of Buenos Aires, we have pursued a strategy of change and reform - based on austerity - and it has yielded economic growth. Our province is not only the political center of Argentina, but its agricultural center. The province is also the nation's industrial heartland, with over half of Argentina's industry and a third of its population. To give you an idea, it would be as if New York, Nebraska, and Washington, D.C. were all in the same state. As our province goes, so goes much of our nation.

Since our economic stabilization in 1991, most of the $8 billion in United States investment has flowed into Buenos Aires; we are the principal destination of almost $5 billion in annual U.S. exports.

The people of our province strongly support national economic reform. For us, privatization is a priority. The province is already moving ahead with its own plan, of which Empresa Social de Energia de Buenos Aires (ESEBA) is a key component. We have cut taxes on productive businesses to increase competitiveness. Given the size and economic role of the province of Buenos Aires, it is arguable that we have been and are the most fiscally conservative province in our country.

We have spent far less per capita than any other province on government programs; per capita, we have far fewer public employees. Only a small percentage of our civil servants work in administration; most are employed as teachers, police officers, medical personnel and judges. While holding down taxes, we have been successful in assuring that the taxes which are due are actually and fairly paid. We are reforming taxes as we reform our economy, making government a positive and not a negative force in achieving our economic potential.

I believe that the public sector must act as a partner with the private sector, not an adversary. I believe in cooperation between the national government and the province to strengthen price stability and to spur economic growth.

One the principal reasons for my visit to the United States is the privatization of ESEBA. This privatization rests on a basic philosophy of government: It should not attempt to do what private enterprise can do better. By shifting assets to the free market, we will increase both the short term revenues of government and the long term prosperity of workers and businesses alike. Privatizing the ESEBA utility is only part of a sweeping reform that will involve all areas where the private sector can function more efficiently. I am pledged to a free and open economy where individuals can strive to reach their potential, where businesses can succeed in an open environment without artificial barriers, and where competition produces the best results for the greatest number of people.

In closing let me say that this trip to you country is part of a longer journey -- not of one man or party, but of a great nation poised on the edge of entering a new century and achieving its true and vast potential. We travel the road of time and hope conscious of the words of Miguel de Cervantes: "Diligence is the mother of good fortune."

We in Argentina shall be diligent in the defense and fulfillment of our democracy. We shall be diligent in the work of economic reform.

We shall be diligent in reaching out to other nations like the United States, to seek with you and your productive enterprises a new partnership for prosperity, based on equality, on shared interest and shared ideals.

We look forward to a future of promise, where countries such as ours and yours are joined by commerce and aspiration, not divided by walls of suspicion and narrow advantage.

It is a time for greatness -- and the only limits we face are the ones we impose on ourselves.

Let us, with the confidence and resolve found in the ideals that gave birth to the independence of the Americas, advance together to achieve both the separate and common destinies that our peoples so much deserve.
