Appendix I: Services

To capitalize on the positive momentum generated by the recent Obama visit to China, the Chairman's recent visits to the United States, and the successful public relations campaign of 2009, Brown Lloyd James will continue with and build upon a media and public opinion campaign to promote strategic dialogue on issues such as the environment, energy, business, and security. By stressing the positive developments that China has made in areas for potential cooperation with U.S. counterparts and leveraging the contacts and supporters we have established, BLJ can continue the public discussion on China as an indispensable partner to the U.S.

BLJ will continue to build upon a successful year of expanding third-party supporters, generating media placements, arranging visits for delegations to China, and supporting CUSEF activity within the U.S. The following items were achieved in 2009:

BLJ arranged for two journalist visits consisting of four high-profile journalists to visit China in May and November 2009. The journalists represented top publications in the United States including Newsweek, the National Journal, the Nation, Congressional Quarterly, U.S. News and World Report, the Chicago Tribune, and the Washington Note. In total, there were 28 media placements generated as a result of these visits.

BLJ continued to draft material, facilitate the publication of op-eds, and arrange media interviews for third-party supporters. In total, BLJ assisted with or directly influenced the publication of 26 opinion articles and quotes within 103 separate articles. BLJ presented daily reports throughout 2009, outlining general media coverage as well as specifically BLJ generated media.

In total, BLJ directly contributed to or influenced a total of articles, which averages out to 3 per week.

BLJ supported three separate Chairman visits to the United States in 2009, arranging three dinners with top-tier media editors and executives from the top publications in the United States including the Wall Street Journal, New York Times, Forbes Magazine, Time Magazine, the Week Magazine, Financial Times, and the Daily Beast. In total, BLJ introduced nineteen individuals at the very top tier of media to Mr. Tung. BLJ continues to follow up with the aforementioned media executives, providing CUSEF material and general updates to all.

BLJ provided support including meetings and speaking opportunities in the United States for CUSEF board members including Elsie Leung and Mr. Xu Kuangdi.

BLJ conducted a thorough analysis of four leading United States high-school textbooks regarding their coverage and portrayal of issues relating to Tibet and China. BLJ drafted and submitted a report along with recommendations for countering the tide of public discourse.

BLJ arranged for one former Congressmen visit consisting of Congressmen George Hochbrueckner and Congressmen Steve Kuykendall.

In addition, BLJ achieved the following:

- secured an in-depth, long-form interview for Mr. Tung with Charlie Rose;
- arranged a speech for Mr. Tung at New York University;
- invited and facilitated media participation at a speech at Georgetown University;
- invited and facilitated media participation to the launch of Power and Restraint;
- presented short-form media opportunities for the Chairman with NPR, CNN, and CNBC;

- secured placement for Mr. Tung's op-ed in the Washington Post;
- arranged a meeting between Mr. Tung and Bill Daley;
- facilitated a partnership between CUSEF and the East-West Institute;
- strategized and consulted on the creation of a new website for the Foundation;
- advised and edited CUSEF materials and speeches;
- provided general counsel and advisement on all public relations activities.

In 2010, the campaign will continue to leverage third party spokespeople, compiled from BLJ's existing cadre along with additional individuals identified as appropriate, who can effectively disseminate positive messages to the media, key influencers and opinion leaders, and the general public. In addition, we propose expanding public relations activities to include the following areas outlined below:

Brown Lloyd James will advise and provide tactical support to the Foundation in arranging speeches and media for the Chairman and CEO, and identifying appropriate strategic partners and activities in the U.S.

Objectives:

Develop and foster a community of like-minded experts on U.S.-China relations.

Continue to build relationships with influential media figures who can serve as positive voices for discussions on U.S.-China relations.

Continue to construct a positive and cohesive message of U.S.-China engagement and work to broadcast the message through the Chairman, the Board of Governors, Third-party supporters and organizations, and the media.

Tactics include the following:

A) Media Engagement

Real-Time Situation Analysis

Brown Lloyd James will continually monitor the U.S. media for coverage of the China related news and stories and will provide a real-time analysis as events unfold and articles appear. BLJ will send a daily report with an in-depth situation analysis and recommendations, including detailed descriptions on any possible follow-up actions that need to be taken.

Brown Lloyd James shall endeavor to secure statements in support of China in the form of articles, responses, or interviews in the American mainstream media. Over the course of the year BLJ will endeavor to place an average of 3 media coverage (interview, Op-Eds, quotes) per week. In addition, BLJ will provide a monthly analysis of supporters engaged, media placements garnered, and op-eds placed. BLJ will continue to update the Foundation on its progress on all counts, including following up with journalists, securing media responses, and engaging supporters.

Third Party Spokespeople

BLJ will continue to identify, map, and engage third party spokespeople to highlight constructive and balanced messages concerning US-China relations in the US media. BLJ will select such third-party spokespeople following a thorough review of their previous comments and writings, to ensure that supporters are balanced and constructive in their messaging. Given the complicated, expansive, and dynamic nature of US-China relations,

Brown Lloyd James

NEW YORK WASHINGTON LONDON DOLIA

BLJ cannot guarantee that all comments from supporters will be positive; however supporters will more often than not speak constructively and with a strong understanding of China's perspective on the issues.

BLJ will continue to expand our cadre of third party supporters and deploy them in media campaigns throughout national and local US media. We will share CUSEF materials and resources with the supporters in order to encourage positive messaging. We will also identify and work directly with spokespeople to author positive opinion articles on China for publication in US print and online media. These op-eds will be tailored to focus on individual areas that can benefit from U.S. cooperation, including art, environment, sport, business, education, security, and technology.

BLJ will also work with CUSEF to arrange periodic commentary written by the Chairman and board members of CUSEF. BLJ will endeavor to secure a total of 30 Op-Eds in major American media per year and arrange for the delivery of such op-eds in US media in a timely and consistent manner. BLJ will also expand its op-ed outreach in 2010 to work with participants of CUSEF's other programs, including Lieutenant Governors, State Legislators, academics, and other contacts, to draft and publish op-eds in relevant US media. For this, BLJ will rely on CUSEF's introduction to key program participants.

BLJ will work with our contacts at the highest circulation newspapers in key regional markets throughout the US, including Chicago, Los Angeles, New York, Boston, San Francisco, Washington DC, Atlanta, Miami, and others, as well as with highly-read and respected online media, to place these op-eds. This would guarantee that Mr. Tung's message of constructive US-China engagement was widely distributed and received. Please note that placement in of each piece produced would not be guaranteed but BLJ would work with individual editors to place each op-ed.

BLJ will also build on relationships with editors and reporters initiated during the Chairman's trips, as well as with journalists that have participated in a delegation visit to China. BLJ will continue our discussions on the importance of U.S.-China relations and regularly distribute relevant information.

Journalist Media Trips to China

In order to develop favorable coverage in key national media, BLJ will continue to organize and staff "familiarization trips" to China. This includes recruiting top journalists to travel to China, selected for effectiveness and opportunities for favorable coverage. These visits should be designed to offer a fresh and positive look at China's accomplishments, and underscore how important it is for the US to engage directly with China. BLJ recommends a group of 3-5 journalists per trip with a mix of reporters that focus on international business, foreign policy, and cultural issues.

In addition, BLJ recommends that at least one Journalist trip per year be focused on one specific topic or subject area. For example, BLJ suggests the October 2010 trip to focus on ethnic minorities and religious diversity. BLJ suggests that the trip be comprised of 3-5 cultural and religious reporters and that the visit offer insight into China's achievements in diversifying its population, providing opportunities for minorities, and encouraging religious freedom for all ethnic groups.

At a later stage, this trip can be expanded to include Tibet with select participants chosen for effectiveness and opportunities for favorable coverage. Group participants can be selected from previous trips to ensure familiarity with the Foundation's goals, and combined with religious leaders chosen for their diversity of opinions and open minds.

Time Schedule: Brown Lloyd James recommends arranging at least three trips a year. Please note price is subject to change based on airline ticket changes.

Note: Implementation of the proposed Journalist Familiarization Trip to China program is subjected to approval of CUSEF on project basis.

Journalism School Media Trips to China

In order to educate the next generation of U.S. journalists on China and US-China relations while they are still honing their craft, BLJ will organize and staff "familiarization trips" to China for a select group of journalism students, selected for their open-minded outlook and their interest in Sino-U.S. relations. The visits should serve as a general introduction to China and Chinese students but should also focus on innovation in specific sectors such as the media environment, education, arts/entertainment, business, technology, etc. The trips will be designed to offer a fresh and positive look at China's accomplishments, help dispel misperceptions, promote constructive reporting, and underscore how important it is for the U.S. to engage directly with China in the years to come. BLJ will facilitate partnerships between CUSEF and high-profile Graduate Journalism Programs to promote academic exchanges between Chinese and American journalism students. BLJ will contact each Journalism school and arrange for promotional materials and applications to be distributed. Applications can be sent to BLJ for review and a shortlist will later be sent to CUSEF for final approval. BLJ will conduct in-depth interviews with the final candidates for selection to the trip.

Time Schedule: Brown Lloyd James recommends arranging two trips a year during the winter and Spring breaks. Please note price is subject to change based on airline ticket changes.

Note: Implementation of the proposed Journalism School Familiarization Trip to China program is subjected to approval of CUSEF on project basis.

B) Chairman's Visits to the United States

BLJ suggests continuing to utilize the Chairman's visits to educate the public and conduct broadcast television interviews. BLJ suggests that the Chairman do at least one media interview per trip. The priority for interviews will be longer form programs such as Fareed Zakaria GPS, Political Capital with Al Hunt, and the Amanpour Show.

The recent Chairman visits have been highly successful in engaging key media and supporters, and developing relationships. The meetings with top-tier editors and journalists from the world's top newspapers and magazines are invaluable for their effectiveness in engaging support from the leaders of the news industry. While it cannot be quantified, the influence that Mr. Tung has had on high-level opinion-formers has served to sway news coverage in major outlets and influence the elite. On future trips, BLJ recommends the following types of events in order to maximize exposure and arrange constructive visits:

- BLJ will organize small dinners (8-10 guests) for Mr. Tung with top-tier media figures (DC and NY)

Estimated Cost for Salon Events: $3,000-$5,000

Develop working group discussions with third-party supporters in order to maintain a community of like-minded experts on U.S.-China relations.

Time Schedule: BLJ recommends one three-hour lunchtime session to be held in either New York or Washington D.C. during the Chairman's next trip. Supporters would prepare their own materials and present them at the event.

Estimated Cost for Salon Events: $3,000-$5,000

Note: Implementations of the proposed Salon Events programs are subjected to approval of CUSEF on project basis.

Broadcast interview: Charlie Rose, Jim Lehrer, Fareed Zakaria (CNN), Christiane Amanpour (CNN).

C) Friends of CUSEF & Board Member Visits

BLJ will provide strategic guidance and support for two-three US visits per year by Chinese officials and other various Chinese individuals arranged by CUSEF. Individual strategies and outreach will vary based on the expertise of the individual, but will generally include arranging meetings, introductions, media opportunities, and speaking engagements.

BLJ will also support approximately 2-3 US visits by CUSEF board members during 2010. Such periodic visits will be determined by CUSEF pending schedule availability of the board members.

D) Tibet Factual Review

The issue of Tibet-China relations remains highly visible, but deeply misunderstood in the U.S. It is an issue that can be improved and event reversed in the public perception, but not overnight. Brown Lloyd James (BLJ) proposes that a strong, factual counter-narrative be introduced to defend and promote the actions of China within the Tibet Autonomous Region. By creating a factual account of the Chinese impact on Tibet and producing a report that eliminates the emotion from the situation, we believe we will have a strong platform from which to address critics of China.

BLJ has conducted the first stage of a textbook analysis, and will proceed with contacting editors and publishers once the CUSEF sponsored study is published and there is material with which to approach the relevant parties.

BLJ will assist CUSEF with the following campaign:

1. Initiate a short-medium term US campaign to influence key constituencies (politicians, academics & experts) as well as general public opinion regarding China's true efforts and intentions in Tibet
2. Change the debate about Tibet in the US to one that reduces the purely emotional arguments and promotes accurate, factual evidence.
3. Develop and promote a positive and cohesive narrative description of China's engagement and history with Tibet, noting the many educational, infrastructure, and other investments in the region.
4. Begin implementing a long-term strategy for better informing the next generation of US thought leaders about China-Tibet.

These goals will be accomplished by employing the following methods:

Publish a Tibet Taskforce Report in order to construct a positive and cohesive message as a basis for all discussion related to China-Tibet relations.
Target key districts where public opinion is most crucial on the issue and conduct a thorough media, arts, and culture campaign to educate these demographics
Undertake a long-term educational campaign to inform a younger generation of learners of the accurate history of China-Tibet relations.

NEW YORK WASHINGTON LONDON DOHA

E) Former U.S. Congressmen Program

Former US government officials, such as Congressmen from the House and Senate, often remain very engaged in the political scene nationally and locally. Their expertise in how the US government operates gives them unique insight into the issues and challenges facing US politicians on a daily basis. As a result, they often retain close relationships with current politicians and serve as advisors to top companies in the Washington DC area, as well as in their local home states.

BLJ proposes expanding on the December 2009 pilot program for former US Congressmen to visit China. Former Congressmen can visit with current and former politicians in China, university professors and students, think-tanks, and businesspeople to deepen their understanding of China's peaceful development. Additionally, cultural activities and touring historic sites can also provide further context into the history of China's development. Such visits will also help inform Chinese officials and thinkers about America's perspectives of current domestic and foreign affairs issues that are relevant to China.

Following the visits, BLJ will work with the former Congressmen to create reports on their experiences that will be distributed to politicians, experts, and other relevant individuals and organizations in the US. BLJ will also explore securing media coverage surrounding the visits.

Time Schedule: Brown Lloyd James proposes arranging 1-2 trips in 2010, with participants chosen based on their seniority and relevance to US-China relations during their time in Congress, as well as their open-minded perspective to China. We recommend one trip with 4-6 former House Representatives in the spring of 2010, and a subsequent trip with 4-6 former Senators in the fall of 2010.

Note: Implementation of the proposed Former Congressmen Trips to China is subjected to approval of CUSEF on project basis.

F) Religious Freedom Program

BLJ proposes that a trip for religious and cultural leaders such as xyz to visit China and explore themes of ethnic diversity, religious tolerance, and cultural celebration. The leaders can meet with their counterparts in China and explore points of common interest and the road ahead. They can also tour historic sites, view cultural performances, and visit museums to gain a deeper understanding into Chinese culture.

Time Schedule: Brown Lloyd James recommends arranging at least one trip a year with select participants being chosen to join a trip to Tibet with journalists at a future date. Please note price is subject to change based on airline ticket changes.

Note: Implementation of the proposed Religious Freedom Trip to China is subjected to approval of CUSEF on project basis.

G) Website

BLJ will offer general strategic guidance and recommendations for a redesigned CUSEF website under the general terms of our contract.

Brown Lloyd James

NEW YORK WASHINGTON LONDON DOHA

BLJ will assist CUSEF by participating in detailed strategy meetings, managing day-to-day relations with web designers, overseeing development of the website from a US point of view, outreach to third-parties for support and involvement, and preparing & revising launch content in English.

Finally, post-launch, BLJ can offer continuous US-based daily support for maintaining and updating the website with new content. This would include liaising with third-parties for content (endeavor to secure 30 exclusive Op-Eds per year commencing on the Web site launch date), aggregating news and providing analysis and summaries, sourcing contributions from well-known American experts and journalists, drafting content in English, and providing daily strategy & advice on content suggestions, amongst other activities. These post-launch efforts would fall under the scope of conducting project management for the website and can be conducted for an additional project fee once the fixed scope of work is agreed upon.

H) Strategic Advice

BLJ will continue to provide strategic advice on the US market for the Foundation. This will include senior level involvement in engaging in periodic discussions with Foundation leadership, including the Chairman and CEO, as well as preparing strategic advice on broad opportunities- and potential concerns- for enhanced US-China relations. BLJ will provide an annual strategic overview (subject to quarterly review) that plans out the media engagement direction for the Foundation.

BLJ will also work with the China-U.S. Exchange Foundation on building and enhancing its resources and establishing a U.S. presence for the Foundation.

U.S. Presence: BLJ would be pleased to serve as a representative office for the China-U.S. Exchange Foundation, thereby establishing a U.S. presence for interested parties and media to use as a resource.

BLJ would be able to distribute newsletters to third-party supporters and key partners in the United States, as well as enlist supporters to draft items for the newsletter on the importance of U.S.-China engagement and understanding.

The additional costs associated with this service may include any costs incurred for the purpose of mailing distributions and communication fees.
