Ramadan Kareem

The Executive Leadership of Sudan Peoples' Liberation Movement (SPLM-N) has taken the difficult decision regarding the return of a group of its leading members to the new Khartoum- a city now adorning a new semblance under the mantle of revolution. The group, headed by the Deputy Chairman, Yasir Arman, and Secretary General Ismail Jalab will include other leading members. In these times when our country is facing a parlous choice of to being or not, we have always yearned for it to be, and in vanguard of nations. Here we are today sending ahead an advance party of seven leading members headed by the official spokesman of the SPLM-N, Mubarak Ardol, arriving in Khartoum today at 13:00 PM. Let us straighten our lines in a prayer alongside our people and the revolutionary forces asking for a new dawn of unbreakable unity between the people and the revolution.

Our country must progress towards a just peace, democracy, fairness and equal citizenship- and doing away with racism and discrimination.

All forces of armed resistance have distinguished themselves in contributing to this revolution. And they should be in prime position when the features of the new political transition are being drawn. The arena of peaceful resistance front is indispensable and we, without hesitation, intend to make our contribution there, and are prepared to make the necessary sacrifices in the cause of our people.

The ongoing Sudanese revolution must put ending civil wars at the top of its priorities, and our delegation will remind all of this prime concern. We also call on all armed resistance movements, the Sudan Armed Forces and the Rapid Deployment Force to set in motion new security arrangements in the interest of beloved Sudan, and to stop ongoing civil wars through a just peace that will address the root causes of conflict. The issues of war, marginalization, peoples affected by dams, martyrs, the injured, youths, women and of the captured state must be resolved in favour of a state for all, and must remain at the forefront of preoccupations of the revolution.

Glory to the people of Sudan

Glory to the forces of the Sudanese revolution.
