Subject: Exhibition Preview: #SerbiaInRealLife, American University Katzen Art Museum

My name is Alana Abramson and I am helping with media for an upcoming exhibition called #SerbiaInRealLife at American University's Katzen Arts Center in Washington D.C. We are giving a small group of journalists access to the exhibition prior to its opening on February 8, and were wondering if someone from the Wall Street Journal would be interested in attending and reviewing.

A bit about #SerbiaInRealLife: It is a contemporary multimedia exhibit showcasing the dynamic and diverse work of 12 leading Serbian artists, including renowned painter Biljana Đurđević and celebrated sculptor, Gabriel Glid as they dive into their country's evolving identity. This the first array of work from Serbian artists featured in Washington D.C. that highlights the country's evolution, including the intention to challenge outdated stereotypes about their country.

We can also offer an interview with Marija Milošević, the exhibition organizer, who has organized over 40 exhibits utilizing art to promote cultural diplomacy on behalf of Serbia.

Kindly let me know ASAP if interested in previewing to discuss details and arrangements.

Thanks!

Alana
