

For attribution to an NSO Spokesman:

The Israeli court today ordered that Facebook restore access to one of several NSO employees whose accounts were suspended last year. The court is expected to rule at a later time on similar complaints lodged by other NSO employees against Facebook, but today's decision, and the court's dismissal of Facebook's arguments in defense of its actions, are an important victory for NSO.

We are confident that further to the unequivocal statements made today by the court, Facebook will restore access for all NSO employees who have been denied access to the platform, and to related applications.
