

Attributable to Oren Ganz, an NSO Director:

"NSO Group has successfully developed 'Fleming', an innovative, unique and purely analytical system designed to respond to the coronavirus pandemic. Fleming has been designed for the benefit of government decision-makers, without compromising individual privacy.

This system has been demonstrated worldwide with great transparency to media organizations, and approximately 100 individual countries.

The Fleming demo is not based on real and genuine data. The demo is rather an illustration of public obfuscated data. It does not contain any personal identifying information (PII) of any sort.

This transparent demo, the same shown to individual countries and media organizations, was the one located on the open random server in question, and the very same demo observed today by TechCrunch.

All other speculation about this overt, open system is not correct, and does not align with the basic fact this transparent demonstration has been seen by hundreds of people in media and government worldwide."
