	10:00:00 AM	Posted	GLOBAL	FEED	One of Italy's natural beauties comes in the form of 18 mountain peaks located in the northern Italian Alps. Rising to 3,000 meters, the Dolomites are hard to miss due to both their height and incredible views. In 2009, the group of mountains joined the @UNESCOWorldHeritage List based on their intricate cracks, diverse spectrum of colors, and the scientific interest around the site. Visitors who decide to travel to the Dolomites will always find something to do year-round. Outdoorsy travelers might consider taking a long hike up the mountainside, skiing, cycling or even rafting. Don't forget to snap a picture of the Three Peaks—located in Alta Pusteria, these three mountain tops are considered the symbol of the entire Dolomites area! #unescoworldheritage #italy #UNESCO #italia #TheDolomites #love #skiing #like #beautiful #travel #art #cycling #likeitaly	The Dolomites	Tag in image: @Italiat

Tuesday, November 2	10:00:00 AM	Posted	SOCIAL	FEED	On this day in 1906, Italian film director Luchino Visconti was born in Milan, Italy ! Many know Visconti as the "father of Neorealism" due to his immense influence on post-World War II filmmaking which would eventually become known as neorealism. Italian neorealism is regarded as the Golden Age in the world of cinema and is known for the use of footage of real people going about their lives. The new style of movie had an emotional impact on viewers by reflecting an image of society that was less filtered. Visconti's innovative documentary "La terra trema" (The Earth Trembles) followed fishermen throughout Sicily and included no paid actors. This gave viewers a glimpse into the life of those citizens instead of a retelling of their stories and struggles.	Luchino Visconti		https://www.britannica.com/biography/Luchino-Visconti-Italian-director https://www.movementsinfilm.com/italian-neorealism

Sunday, November 7	10:00:00 AM –		SCI/ECON	FEED	50 years ago, two fifth-century BC Greek bronze statues were recovered off the coast of Riace, Italy. Now, on the anniversary of the groundbreaking discovery, the town has big plans to search for more ancient artifacts and build a museum in commemoration. A team of Italian researchers, scientists and archaeologists are seeking additional metallic treasures, including a potential third statue, reported to have been spotted in 1972. It was described as having "open arms and one leg in front of the other"—a description that doesn't match either of the two bronzes on display. The team plans to utilize location points provided by U. S. researchers to begin their search. https://www.theartnewspaper.com/2021/10/15/golden-anniversary-for-riace-bronzes-to-be-marked-in-calabrian-town-near-where-they-were-found	link auto-populates
