BELGRADE - Serbian PM Ana Brnabic on Tuesday received Steve Wozniak, the US tech entrepreneur, electrical engineer, IT guru, philanthropist and inventor best known as the co-founder of the tech giant Apple.

Thanking Wozniak for his visit to Serbia and interest in the country, Brnabic said she was greatly honoured by the opportunity to hear his experiences in various fields, including engineering education for young people, tech entrepreneurship and startups and development of artificial intelligence in the future.

She noted that the fact the ICT sector had become the fastest-growing sector in Serbia was an evident result of such investments, and added that exports by the sector were expected to total around 3.8 bln euros in 2023.
