NISU GLASALE ZA REZOLUCIJU O SREBRENICI • VUJOVIĆ: "DUBOKO" ĆE BITI NAJMODERNIJI CENTAR ZA UPRAVL.

"It is normal for a car to remain protected for a period of time, while it is still in the development phase. All that is normal, it is what other global manufacturers do, too, but, after that, I really expect us to see it in full glory at an unveiling and then also in the streets of cities in Serbia and around the world," he said.

In 2022, automaking giant Stellantis, whose operations also include the Fiat Chrysler Automobili Serbia plant in Kragujevac, announced the launch of a fully electric car model for late 2024.

Despite reports the model would be a restyled version of the Fiat Panda, Stellantis has still not officially revealed the name or the looks of the new car.

It is expected to be unveiled in the summer, with series production to begin in Q3 2024.
