Subject: Why Aruba Belongs on the Fall Travel List

Hi [REDACTED]

As summer winds down, fall offers travelers a chance to stretch the season a little longer. In Aruba, that means plenty of sunshine alongside local culture, cuisine, and experiences that extend well beyond the beach.

For any upcoming fall travel or Caribbean coverage, a few Aruba points that may be useful:

- Keep the summer feeling going: With its sunny climate and year-round cooling trade winds, and location outside the main Atlantic hurricane belt, travelers can plan a Caribbean escape with greater weather confidence.
- Trade the beach chair for exploring: Beyond Aruba's famous beaches, travelers can hike through the rugged landscapes of Arikok National Park, explore the colorful streets and murals of San Nicolas, and get a taste of the island through its local culinary scene.
- Fall brings plenty to the table – and the court: Aruba's fall calendar keeps the island buzzing, from the Autentico Aruba Culinary Festival in October, celebrating the island's diverse culinary culture, to the Aruba Open Beach Tennis Championships in November, which brings professional and amateur players and fans together for one of the island's signature sporting events.

Let me know if Aruba could be a fit for any upcoming fall or Caribbean coverage! Happy to share more details on Aruba's hotels, restaurants, and experiences if helpful. You can find hi-res images HERE.

Thanks,
