Cvijanović: With sincere dialogue, “Serbs, Croats, Bosniaks and other citizens can have a good life together” – SRNA

📅 January 12, 2022

Republika Srpska (RS) President Željka Cvijanović said in an interview with SRNA that BiH's destiny mostly depends of the behavior of the Bosniaks' politics.

She said, “I believe that Serbs, Croats, Bosniaks and other citizens can have a good life together, the precondition for which is a sincere dialogue because the fools bite one another, but wise men agree together, not by the force or hatred.”

Regarding some Bosniak politicians' criticism of RS Ministry of Interior members in Sunday's parade marking RS Day, Ms. Cvijanović said, “The same members of the Mol are in charge of protecting the Republika Srpska citizens and their property every working day, which means Bosniaks who live here and their property. No one in either the Ministry of Interior or other institutions of Republika Srpska has ever made any distinction in that regard, nor will one make it, nor is one allowed to make it.”

She said that neither Bosniaks, nor Croats, nor any national minority should worry, because they are all equal citizens of Republika Srpska, regardless of religion, nation or any other orientation, which is an imperative.

As for the incidents and provocations recorded against non-Serbs during the holidays, the president of the Republic said that the perpetrators should be sanctioned in accordance with the law.
