Patrick Schwarzenegger and wife Abby Champion are sharing an inside look at their Abu Dhabi vacation

During the trip, the newlyweds rode camels, took in the arts and sat courtside at an NBA game

The romantic getaway comes about a month after the couple tied the knot in an Idaho wedding on Sept. 6

White Lotus star Patrick Schwarzenegger and his model wife Abby Champion got their toes in the sand on a recent trip to Abu Dhabi.

“What a beautiful time experiencing the desert,” the actor, 32, wrote in the caption of an Oct. 5 Instagram post, followed by a desert and camel emoji.

The post, which tagged the United Arab Emirates’ capital, featured photos of the newlyweds enjoying all the city had to offer — including a front row seat at the NBA’s Abu Dhabi Games 2025.

In the first slide, Schwarzenegger and Champion, 28, posed for an adorable selfie outside the Sheikh Zayed Grand Mosque, a popular place for worship and tourist attraction in the country. The actor also shared photos from their time riding camels in the sand. In one snap, Schwarzenegger smiled side-by-side with two thumbs up next to one of the desert animals.

Our list of the Best Places to Go in 2026 is a reminder of the paradox that our world is at once very big, and very small. Every year, we manage to unearth intel on places that many readers have yet to consider visiting; and yet, at the same time, rebirth and reinvention are you travel over the next 12 months, you'll notice that we were excited by places that already feel familiar and yet are being imbued with an exciting new cultural centre of gravity; we also visited the lake city of Udaipur, where a flurry of luxury-hotels is taking place. There are also under-the-radar gems gaining momentum in Prince Edward County, where a wave of indie hotels is redefining the weekend escape; or Fès, Morocco, set to shine in 2026 with the historic reopening of the city after a year restoration.

Sitting at the edge of a vast swath of jungle, the city of Arusha is embracing its surrounding nature with a slate of new forest hotels and a primatology centre dedicated to the late Dr Jane Goodall.

Rumours of the late primatologist Jane Goodall's new museum in the city of Arusha have circulated for months – and now, finally, they're true. The Centre for Hope will open in late October 2026, at the former site of the Cultural Heritage Centre. Created by a team of conservationists and inspired by Disney's Animal Kingdom, the space will consist of a museum, including a theatre and a Garden of Commitment, designed to inspire hope for future generations.

While the city received media attention recently for the opening of the Arusha, the city is abuzz with other goings-on, too, courtesy of the minimalist Makao Collective, which curates gorgeous interior decor, to Opuk Lounge, which makes delicious cocktails, and to focused safari outings with The Wild Source. Speaking of safaris, the 10,000-seat Samia Suluhu Hassan soccer stadium in Arusha is set to be completed in the summer of 2026, primed to host the 2027 Africa Cup of Nations.

Surfing hippos, gorillas, and humpback whales are just a few of the highlights of Gabon's incredible and often overlooked national park.

Cyril Ruoso/Loango Savannah Camp

Gabon's tourism industry might still be in its infancy, but it's quickly becoming one of Africa's (and arguably the world's) most exhilarating destinations. In January, the park celebrated the opening of Loango Savannah Camp. Located in the heart of the park, this new tented camp is one of three properties in the park. Dubbed Africa's Last Eden, Loango – a world-class park with lagoons pouring into the wild Atlantic – offers, and is being called the best gorilla trekking experience in the world.

If three lodges are two too many, head south to Nyanga Lodge, which opened in early 2025, enjoy a private safari property in what locals refer to as the “green heart” of the park.

For 2026 include outdoor dining experiences from a new treetop terrace to beach dinners, all the better to spy one of the park's many primate species or marine spectacles like migrating humpback whales and nesting sea turtles. With its surrounding waters also Camp at the remote southern end of Loango National Park promises to be a game-changer. The first property in Machaba Safaris' base camp will focus on adventures that favour activities like jungle treks (tracking chimpanzee elephants, and red river hogs), longer coastal treks (spotting creatures on the beach as well as surfing hippos (ideal for spotting dwarf crocodiles, incredible bioluminescent manatees), it's all about active engagement with nature. Perhaps the ultimate and most intimate version of this will launch its first full season of multi-night private safaris in 2026, using Sette Cama Eco Camp as its base.

While Gabon's wonders are both unique and abundant, rudimentary at best, and great wildlife sightings are rare. Expeditions, a pioneer in conservation-forward travel, offers itineraries in 2026, private guides will help guests explore its crystalline streams.

How to plan it: Air France flies direct from Paris to Libreville (the parks by charter flight is highly recommended, flying three to four times weekly) and Turkish Airline flies nonstop. FlyGabon and ASKY both offer twice-weekly direct flights to and from São Tomé and Príncipe. Consider a "holiday" pairing with a Gabon adventure. Gabon is a developing ground, so use a locally based operator like Iniva (Savannah Camp and Nyanga Lodge) for everything from obtaining the required "invitation letter" and visas to booking charter flights. Similarly, Anderson Expeditions or Machaba Safaris can assist with all in-country arrangements. While occurring year-round, gorilla trekking is best in the rainy seasons (February through April and October through November), when it's also a good time to see wildlife on the beaches and to fish.

Few places in Latin America embody reinvention like Bogotá, the largest city has, in less than two decades, gone from a city of ingenuity. Cable cars and a modern metro stitch together a city once considered unsafe for visitors and now a symbol of modern destination – with tree-lined avenues that spill into the hills.

That energy crests in 2026 with Wake, a $100-million hotel, residences, and more than a dozen restaurants, an ambitious culinary venture yet. Its centrepiece is a renovation of Cartagena’s acclaimed Celele. At Boro, Rodríguez’s plates spanning the Amazon, Andes, Caribbean and beyond, the intimate chef’s table by chef Adolfo Cavalieri, with 100 per cent Colombian sourcing, will also move forward with research and fermentation labs that deepen the city’s innovation. Other highlights include Wake BioHotel, a “wellness meets science,” with 109 rooms and a spa. The larger complex also brings in heavy-hitters like Hotel El Comodoro alongside spots such as Chez Migú, Somos Mas, and El Comodoro, underscoring the project’s ambition to become a culinary hub. Opening date has yet to be confirmed, with time still on its side. But when Wake does open, it’ll be hard to miss. Bogotá can be as inventive and layered as the country it

Travellers impatient for the release of Christopher Nolan's The Odyssey are flocking to Greece's myth-drenched Peloponnese peninsula, along with relics of the ancient history that shaped the region.

In July 2026, Christopher Nolan's film The Odyssey will be filmed on the cinematic southwest coast of Messinia, where the ancient history of the Peloponnese peninsula is being rediscovered. Sustainability-focused Costa Navarino is the recent influx of restaurants run by Michelin-starred chefs, exploring the film locations. Hike to oceanside Messini, where Odysseus outwits the Cyclops. Swim in Poseidon Beach and photograph flamingos at Gialova Lagoon near the nearby town of Pylos, where Odysseus's son sees the ghost of Nestor.

Homer's mythical characters were inspired by the Peloponnese during the Bronze Age. At Nestor's tomb, you can see the civilisation and overlook the spot where archaeologists discovered a Mycenaean warrior's tomb in 2015. This discovery revealed how Mycenaean and Minoan cultures blended to give rise to Western civilisation. The tomb's trove is on international loan for the Kingdom of Pylos exhibition in Los Angeles before returning to Athens for six months, and in late 2026, most of the artefacts will join

Prince Edward County – or PEC – is already a favourite long-weekend destination for many Canadians, especially those from Toronto and Montreal (it's only a few hours' drive from each). The region has been coming into its own for the past decade as a hot spot for boutique hotels, small family-run wineries, and world-class restaurants, but there's plenty more to come. On the hotel front in 2025 alone, newly renovated properties such as

Amid a changing climate, Saint-Gervais-les-Bains is leading the way in sustainable tourism in the Alps – a new energy efficient train and conscious efforts toward positive change in a region with a rich history.

In 2026, Saint-Gervais-les-Bains, in Haute-Savoie, France, will showcase what Alpine tourism can look like. The Mont Blanc Express will connect Saint-Gervais-les-Bains' Le Fayet station to the Mont Blanc Massif via energy-efficient trains in the summer. For a line that has been in operation since 1900, this is a major upgrade: proof that sustainable travel is no longer just a goal but a reality moving forward. The new trains will double capacity, cut travel time in half, and connect the valleys, while strengthening the cross-border link between France and Italy. From 2026, the Léman Express from Geneva will be able to reach Saint-Gervais-les-Bains in less than an hour, making it easier than ever to arrive in the Mont Blanc foothills and enjoy the view.
