Big news for global trade: The Port of Virginia is on track to become the deepest and widest port on the U.S. East Coast. With channels being dredged to 55 feet deep and widened to allow two-way ultra-large container vessel (ULCV) traffic, the port will soon accommodate the world's largest ships more efficiently than ever.

By 2025, the port will boast the deepest, widest channels on the East Coast, positioning Virginia as a major hub for international shipping and driving significant economic growth across the region. This investment, part of a $1.4 billion strategic plan, is setting the stage for faster cargo movement and expanded global connectivity. 🌐 ⚓
