Last week, we welcomed representatives from eight German subsidiaries operating across the United States to Washington, DC for our 3rd DC Fly-In, bringing together business leaders and policymakers for timely discussions on the U.S. trade and tariff landscape.

The 24-hour program included discussions with the U.S. House Committee on Ways & Means, Office of the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR), Council of Economic Advisers, The White House, Embassy of Germany in Washington, D.C., and the National Association of Manufacturers - NAM.

These conversations offered participating companies a firsthand look at current policy priorities while also sharing their voice on opportunities and challenges facing German businesses operations in the U.S.

The discussions reinforced the value of the German-American partnership and the important role German companies play as employers, investors, and contributors to communities across the country.

A sincere thank you to all participating companies, policymakers, and partners who helped make this year's fly-in a productive exchange in Washington, D.C. DEUS
