It's a beautiful day to support Ukraine—and stop Russia and China.

Take a look at our latest action on the grounds of the U.S. Capitol:

It didn't require night vision to notice Colorado @RepBoebert fiddling with her phone as Congress gave President Zelensky a standing ovation while speaking before Congress in December.

Arizona @RepEliCrane told an interviewer he believes the U.S. should "pull back" on aid to Ukraine. You know who won't pull back? Putin. It sends a signal to authoritarians like Putin and Xi that when it comes to freedom, they can wait America out.

Florida's @RepMattGaetz introduced a "Ukraine fatigue" resolution earlier this year to end military and financial aid. This is the message Gaetz wants to send to Putin and Xi: America tires out.

Florida's @RepLuna earlier this year angrily emailed a reporter that Ukraine "demanded" F-35s (the request was for less advanced F-16s) but that might explain why she saluted the Air Force with an image of Russian MiGs.

Notably, this would probably allow Congress to pass a long-term spending deal—with Ukraine aid—and not tarnish a new GOP speaker's rule before it really begins.

Jake Sherman @JakeSherman · 8h
A sense of where things are in the conference.

DAVID JOYCE says he's talking to Republicans and Democrats about empowering @PatrickMcHenry to be speaker for 30, 45 or 60 days. This would allow the House to pass a funding bill while the GOO figur...
