

From: [REDACTED]
To: [REDACTED]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi (FII Trustee & Former PM of Italy) on why emerging markets are a focus of global investors?
Date: Thursday, November 21, 2024 12:39:08 PM
Attachments: image001.png

---

Hi [REDACTED],

Would you be interested in a conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi, former Prime Minister of Italy and member of the Future Investment Initiative \(FII\) Board of Trustees, about the trends driving private investment in emerging markets, which was a defining topic of the recent FII-8 Conference in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia?

Increasingly, emerging markets are attracting global private capital – which is supporting growth and development in these regions. As discussed at FII-8 – which saw global leaders from finance, business, and politics gather to discuss the biggest issues facing citizens across the world and drive impactful investment – there are certain characteristics which are making some emerging markets particularly attractive. These include:

1. A rich talent pool and a strong commercial history.
2. Stable macroeconomic conditions.
3. Hard infrastructure (physical) and soft infrastructure (capital markets) to support commerce.
4. Pro-growth regulatory environments, fostering constructive dialogue between government, businesses, and entrepreneurs.
5. A maturing exit landscape, driven by public market liquidity, domestic investor support, and alignment with global standards.

Matteo can elaborate on these drivers of inward investment, including what less developed markets can learn from them and how we can leverage these insights to unlock even more inward investment into emerging markets and assets.

For additional background, I've included Matteo's full bio below. Do let me know if a conversation is of interest and I will set up a time.

Thanks,

[REDACTED]

+++

Matteo Renzi has been the Senator of the electoral college of Florence since 2018. In his political experience he has served as Prime Minister of Italy from February 2014 to December 2016 and as Mayor of Florence from June 2009 to February 2014. He was the youngest prime minister in the history of the Italian Republic.

With his government's economic policies, Italy has gone from -1.7% of GDP to + 1.6%. His "JobsAct"

bill created 1.2 million new jobs. Foreign investment, the export of Italian products, tourism, the trust of consumers and companies all grew during his government, as had not happened since Italy's adoption of the Euro. Renzi led the European council with the Italian presidency in the second half of 2014. He participated in numerous international meetings including three editions of the G20 (Australia, Turkey, China) and three editions of the G7. He signed the Paris agreement on environmental sustainability and climate change. He tackled the migration crisis as Prime Minister by proposing the Migration Compact in Europe and the Sophia operation named after the little girl saved at sea by Italian volunteers. He signed the law on the recognition of civil unions, multiplied state investments against poverty by 100, led the only Italian government with gender equality between women and men.

Renzi is the author of numerous publications and of a television series on the cultural, financial and artistic beauty of Florence aired in 2018-2019 on the Discovery platform. Renzi graduated in law from the University of Florence. Since 2017 he has taught a course at Stanford University at their Florence headquarters entitled "The challenges of Europe". He is a member of a number of advisory boards. He was a leader of the Italian catholic scout. He is married to Agnese and has three children.

[REDACTED]
Associate Vice President

PRovoke Media's 2023 Global Financial Agency of the Year

From: [REDACTED]
To: [REDACTED]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi (FII Trustee & Former PM of Italy) on why emerging markets are a focus of global investors?
Date: Thursday, November 21, 2024 12:43:31 PM
Attachments: image001.png

---

Hi [REDACTED],

Hope all is well.

Would you be interested in a conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi, former Prime Minister of Italy and member of the Future Investment Initiative \(FII\) Board of Trustees, about the trends driving private investment in emerging markets, which was a defining topic of the recent FII-8 Conference in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia?

Increasingly, emerging markets are attracting global private capital – which is supporting growth and development in these regions. As discussed at FII-8 – which saw global leaders from finance, business, and politics gather to discuss the biggest issues facing citizens across the world and drive impactful investment – there are certain characteristics which are making some emerging markets particularly attractive. These include:

1. A rich talent pool and a strong commercial history.
2. Stable macroeconomic conditions.
3. Hard infrastructure (physical) and soft infrastructure (capital markets) to support commerce.
4. Pro-growth regulatory environments, fostering constructive dialogue between government, businesses, and entrepreneurs.
5. A maturing exit landscape, driven by public market liquidity, domestic investor support, and alignment with global standards.

Matteo can elaborate on these drivers of inward investment, including what less developed markets can learn from them and how we can leverage these insights to unlock even more inward investment into emerging markets and assets.

For additional background, I've included Matteo's full bio below. Do let me know if a conversation is of interest and I will set up a time.

Thanks,

[REDACTED]

+++

Matteo Renzi has been the Senator of the electoral college of Florence since 2018. In his political experience he has served as Prime Minister of Italy from February 2014 to December 2016 and as Mayor of Florence from June 2009 to February 2014. He was the youngest prime minister in the history of the Italian Republic.

With his government's economic policies, Italy has gone from -1.7% of GDP to + 1.6%. His "JobsAct" bill created 1.2 million new jobs. Foreign investment, the export of Italian products, tourism, the trust of consumers and companies all grew during his government, as had not happened since Italy's adoption of the Euro. Renzi led the European council with the Italian presidency in the second half of 2014. He participated in numerous international meetings including three editions of the G20 (Australia, Turkey, China) and three editions of the G7. He signed the Paris agreement on environmental sustainability and climate change. He tackled the migration crisis as Prime Minister by proposing the Migration Compact in Europe and the Sophia operation named after the little girl saved at sea by Italian volunteers. He signed the law on the recognition of civil unions, multiplied state investments against poverty by 100, led the only Italian government with gender equality between women and men.

Renzi is the author of numerous publications and of a television series on the cultural, financial and artistic beauty of Florence aired in 2018-2019 on the Discovery platform. Renzi graduated in law from the University of Florence. Since 2017 he has taught a course at Stanford University at their Florence headquarters entitled "The challenges of Europe". He is a member of a number of advisory boards. He was a leader of the Italian catholic scout. He is married to Agnese and has three children.

[REDACTED]

Associate Vice President

[REDACTED]

PRovoke Media's 2023 Global Financial Agency of the Year

From: [REDACTED]
To: [REDACTED]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi (FII Trustee & Former PM of Italy) on why emerging markets are a focus of global investors?
Date: Thursday, November 21, 2024 12:44:01 PM
Attachments: image001.png

---

Hi [REDACTED],

Would you be interested in a conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi, former Prime Minister of Italy and member of the Future Investment Initiative \(FII\) Board of Trustees, about the trends driving private investment in emerging markets, which was a defining topic of the recent FII-8 Conference in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia?

Increasingly, emerging markets are attracting global private capital – which is supporting growth and development in these regions. As discussed at FII-8 – which saw global leaders from finance, business, and politics gather to discuss the biggest issues facing citizens across the world and drive impactful investment – there are certain characteristics which are making some emerging markets particularly attractive. These include:

1. A rich talent pool and a strong commercial history.
2. Stable macroeconomic conditions.
3. Hard infrastructure (physical) and soft infrastructure (capital markets) to support commerce.
4. Pro-growth regulatory environments, fostering constructive dialogue between government, businesses, and entrepreneurs.
5. A maturing exit landscape, driven by public market liquidity, domestic investor support, and alignment with global standards.

Matteo can elaborate on these drivers of inward investment, including what less developed markets can learn from them and how we can leverage these insights to unlock even more inward investment into emerging markets and assets.

For additional background, I've included Matteo's full bio below. Do let me know if a conversation is of interest and I will set up a time.

Thanks,

[REDACTED]

+++

Matteo Renzi has been the Senator of the electoral college of Florence since 2018. In his political experience he has served as Prime Minister of Italy from February 2014 to December 2016 and as Mayor of Florence from June 2009 to February 2014. He was the youngest prime minister in the history of the Italian Republic.

With his government's economic policies, Italy has gone from -1.7% of GDP to + 1.6%. His "JobsAct"

bill created 1.2 million new jobs. Foreign investment, the export of Italian products, tourism, the trust of consumers and companies all grew during his government, as had not happened since Italy's adoption of the Euro. Renzi led the European council with the Italian presidency in the second half of 2014. He participated in numerous international meetings including three editions of the G20 (Australia, Turkey, China) and three editions of the G7. He signed the Paris agreement on environmental sustainability and climate change. He tackled the migration crisis as Prime Minister by proposing the Migration Compact in Europe and the Sophia operation named after the little girl saved at sea by Italian volunteers. He signed the law on the recognition of civil unions, multiplied state investments against poverty by 100, led the only Italian government with gender equality between women and men.

Renzi is the author of numerous publications and of a television series on the cultural, financial and artistic beauty of Florence aired in 2018-2019 on the Discovery platform. Renzi graduated in law from the University of Florence. Since 2017 he has taught a course at Stanford University at their Florence headquarters entitled "The challenges of Europe". He is a member of a number of advisory boards. He was a leader of the Italian catholic scout. He is married to Agnese and has three children.

[REDACTED]
Associate Vice President

PRovoke Media's 2023 Global Financial Agency of the Year

From: [REDACTED]
To: [REDACTED]
Subject: [EXTERNAL] Conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi (FII Trustee & Former PM of Italy) on why emerging markets are a focus of global investors?
Date: Thursday, November 21, 2024 12:44:34 PM
Attachments: image001.png

---

Hi [REDACTED]

Would you be interested in a conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi, former Prime Minister of Italy and member of the Future Investment Initiative \(FII\) Board of Trustees, about the trends driving private investment in emerging markets, which was a defining topic of the recent FII-8 Conference in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia?

Increasingly, emerging markets are attracting global private capital – which is supporting growth and development in these regions. As discussed at FII-8 – which saw global leaders from finance, business, and politics gather to discuss the biggest issues facing citizens across the world and drive impactful investment – there are certain characteristics which are making some emerging markets particularly attractive. These include:

1. A rich talent pool and a strong commercial history.
2. Stable macroeconomic conditions.
3. Hard infrastructure (physical) and soft infrastructure (capital markets) to support commerce.
4. Pro-growth regulatory environments, fostering constructive dialogue between government, businesses, and entrepreneurs.
5. A maturing exit landscape, driven by public market liquidity, domestic investor support, and alignment with global standards.

Matteo can elaborate on these drivers of inward investment, including what less developed markets can learn from them and how we can leverage these insights to unlock even more inward investment into emerging markets and assets.

For additional background, I've included Matteo's full bio below. Do let me know if a conversation is of interest and I will set up a time.

Thanks,

[REDACTED]
+++

Matteo Renzi has been the Senator of the electoral college of Florence since 2018. In his political experience he has served as Prime Minister of Italy from February 2014 to December 2016 and as Mayor of Florence from June 2009 to February 2014. He was the youngest prime minister in the history of the Italian Republic.

With his government's economic policies, Italy has gone from -1.7% of GDP to + 1.6%. His "JobsAct"

bill created 1.2 million new jobs. Foreign investment, the export of Italian products, tourism, the trust of consumers and companies all grew during his government, as had not happened since Italy's adoption of the Euro. Renzi led the European council with the Italian presidency in the second half of 2014. He participated in numerous international meetings including three editions of the G20 (Australia, Turkey, China) and three editions of the G7. He signed the Paris agreement on environmental sustainability and climate change. He tackled the migration crisis as Prime Minister by proposing the Migration Compact in Europe and the Sophia operation named after the little girl saved at sea by Italian volunteers. He signed the law on the recognition of civil unions, multiplied state investments against poverty by 100, led the only Italian government with gender equality between women and men.

Renzi is the author of numerous publications and of a television series on the cultural, financial and artistic beauty of Florence aired in 2018-2019 on the Discovery platform. Renzi graduated in law from the University of Florence. Since 2017 he has taught a course at Stanford University at their Florence headquarters entitled "The challenges of Europe". He is a member of a number of advisory boards. He was a leader of the Italian catholic scout. He is married to Agnese and has three children.

[REDACTED]
Associate Vice President

PRovoke Media's 2023 Global Financial Agency of the Year

---

From: [REDACTED]
Sent: Thursday, November 21, 2024 5:45 PM
To: [REDACTED]
Subject: Conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi (FII Trustee & Former PM of Italy) on why emerging markets are a focus of global investors?

Hi [REDACTED],

Would you be interested in a conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi, former Prime Minister of Italy and member of the Future Investment Initiative \(FII\) Board of Trustees, about the trends driving private investment in emerging markets, which was a defining topic of the recent FII-8 Conference in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia?

Increasingly, emerging markets are attracting global private capital – which is supporting growth and development in these regions. As discussed at FII-8 – which saw global leaders from finance, business, and politics gather to discuss the biggest issues facing citizens across the world and drive impactful investment – there are certain characteristics which are making some emerging markets particularly attractive. These include:

1. A rich talent pool and a strong commercial history.
2. Stable macroeconomic conditions.
3. Hard infrastructure (physical) and soft infrastructure (capital markets) to support commerce.
4. Pro-growth regulatory environments, fostering constructive dialogue between government, businesses, and entrepreneurs.
5. A maturing exit landscape, driven by public market liquidity, domestic investor support, and alignment with global standards.

Matteo can elaborate on these drivers of inward investment, including what less developed markets can learn from them and how we can leverage these insights to unlock even more inward investment into emerging markets and assets.

For additional background, I've included Matteo's full bio below. Do let me know if a conversation is of interest and I will set up a time.

Thanks,

[REDACTED]

+++

Matteo Renzi has been the Senator of the electoral college of Florence since 2018. In his political experience he has served as Prime Minister of Italy from February 2014 to December 2016 and as Mayor of Florence from June 2009 to February 2014. He was the youngest prime minister in the history of the Italian Republic.

With his government's economic policies, Italy has gone from -1.7% of GDP to + 1.6%. His "JobsAct" bill created 1.2 million new jobs. Foreign investment, the export of Italian products, tourism, the trust of consumers and companies all grew during his government, as had not happened since Italy's adoption of the Euro. Renzi led the European council with the Italian presidency in the second half of 2014. He participated in numerous international meetings including three editions of the G20 (Australia, Turkey, China) and three editions of the G7. He signed the Paris agreement on environmental sustainability and climate change. He tackled the migration crisis as Prime Minister by proposing the Migration Compact in Europe and the Sophia operation named after the little girl saved at sea by Italian volunteers. He signed the law on the recognition of civil unions, multiplied state investments against poverty by 100, led the only Italian government with gender equality between women and men.

Renzi is the author of numerous publications and of a television series on the cultural, financial and artistic beauty of Florence aired in 2018-2019 on the Discovery platform. Renzi graduated in law from the University of Florence. Since 2017 he has taught a course at Stanford University at their Florence headquarters entitled "The challenges of Europe". He is a member of a number of advisory boards. He was a leader of the Italian catholic scout. He is married to Agnese and has three children.

[REDACTED]
Associate Vice President

[REDACTED]

PRovoke Media's 2023 Global Financial Agency of the Year

---

From: [REDACTED]
Sent: Thursday, November 21, 2024 5:46 PM
To: [REDACTED]
Subject: Conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi (FII Trustee & Former PM of Italy) on why emerging markets are a focus of global investors?

Hi [REDACTED],

Would you be interested in a conversation with Senator Matteo Renzi, former Prime Minister of Italy and member of the Future Investment Initiative \(FII\) Board of Trustees, about the trends driving private investment in emerging markets, which was a defining topic of the recent FII-8 Conference in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia?

Increasingly, emerging markets are attracting global private capital – which is supporting growth and development in these regions. As discussed at FII-8 – which saw global leaders from finance, business, and politics gather to discuss the biggest issues facing citizens across the world and drive impactful investment – there are certain characteristics which are making some emerging markets particularly attractive. These include:

1. A rich talent pool and a strong commercial history.
2. Stable macroeconomic conditions.
3. Hard infrastructure (physical) and soft infrastructure (capital markets) to support commerce.
4. Pro-growth regulatory environments, fostering constructive dialogue between government, businesses, and entrepreneurs.
5. A maturing exit landscape, driven by public market liquidity, domestic investor support, and alignment with global standards.

Matteo can elaborate on these drivers of inward investment, including what less developed markets can learn from them and how we can leverage these insights to unlock even more inward investment into emerging markets and assets.

For additional background, I've included Matteo's full bio below. Do let me know if a conversation is of interest and I will set up a time.

Thanks,

[REDACTED]

+++

Matteo Renzi has been the Senator of the electoral college of Florence since 2018. In his political experience he has served as Prime Minister of Italy from February 2014 to December 2016 and as Mayor of Florence from June 2009 to February 2014. He was the youngest prime minister in the history of the Italian Republic.

With his government's economic policies, Italy has gone from -1.7% of GDP to + 1.6%. His "JobsAct" bill created 1.2 million new jobs. Foreign investment, the export of Italian products, tourism, the trust of consumers and companies all grew during his government, as had not happened since Italy's adoption of the Euro. Renzi led the European council with the Italian presidency in the second half of 2014. He participated in numerous international meetings including three editions of the G20 (Australia, Turkey, China) and three editions of the G7. He signed the Paris agreement on environmental sustainability and climate change. He tackled the migration crisis as Prime Minister by proposing the Migration Compact in Europe and the Sophia operation named after the little girl saved at sea by Italian volunteers. He signed the law on the recognition of civil unions, multiplied state investments against poverty by 100, led the only Italian government with gender equality between women and men.

Renzi is the author of numerous publications and of a television series on the cultural, financial and artistic beauty of Florence aired in 2018-2019 on the Discovery platform. Renzi graduated in law from the University of Florence. Since 2017 he has taught a course at Stanford University at their Florence headquarters entitled "The challenges of Europe". He is a member of a number of advisory boards. He was a leader of the Italian catholic scout. He is married to Agnese and has three children.

[REDACTED]
Associate Vice President

[REDACTED]

PRovoke Media's 2023 Global Financial Agency of the Year