Thanks for looping me in, [REDACTED] ! [REDACTED], following up with one additional source:

EVENT: The AI economy: future-proofing the enterprise

- Client: Richard Attias. Chairman and acting CEO, Future Investment Initiative (FII) Institute
- Rationale: Richard Attias has spent decades convening global CEOs, heads of state, sovereign wealth funds, and policymakers to discuss the world's most pressing and innovative initiatives, giving him a unique vantage point on how emerging technologies, particularly AI, are being operationalized at scale across both the public and private sectors. Through FII, he is closely involved in discussions around where capital is being deployed, how cross-sector partnerships are structured, and what it takes to move innovation beyond pilots and product launches into real-world impact.

Richard offers a strategic perspective on AI's evolution from a discrete tool into a more embedded "co-worker" within organizations, shaping capital allocation, partnership models, and long-term innovation planning rather than simply driving near-term productivity gains. He is well positioned to speak to how investors, governments, and enterprises are adapting as AI becomes central to infrastructure, workforce planning, and decision-making, particularly in emerging markets, and what distinguishes AI initiatives that meaningfully scale from those that do not.

Let me know of any questions - looking forward to hearing from you!
